ATTEMPTS TO END LIFE BY POISON

Repents Immediately After Taking 10 Grains of Morphine and Phones Lawyer

New York, Oct. 28.—Evelyn Nesbit, former wife of Harry K. Thaw, and central figure in the two famous murder trials of the latter, attempted to end her life by taking ten grains of morphine in her living quarters above her teashop, at No. 235 West 52d street, this afternoon.

Almost immediately she repented of her action and called her lawyer, notifying him of what she had done. A physician was hastily summoned and it was said she would recover.

U. S. LEGATION AT MONTEVIDEO GUARDED

Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 28.—Special guards were placed around the United States legation and consulate here today in anticipation of possible disorders during the general strike this afternoon in protest against the conviction for murder in Massachusetts of Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Basle, Switzerland, Oct. 28.—Several hundred Communists today attempted to hold a demonstration in front of the American consulate here as a protest against the conviction of Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. The police quickly restored order and dispersed the would-be demonstrators.

21-GUN SALUTE AT YALE ON ARMISTICE DAY

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 28.—Armistice Day will be observed at Yale University by a short ceremony at noon. A detail of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps unit will place on the war memorial tablet in Memorial Hall wreaths in memory of the two hundred and twenty-five Yale men who gave their lives in the late war. A two-minute pause as proclaimed by President Harding will be followed by a national salute of twenty-one guns.

ENGLAND'S "PRETTIEST GIRL" LANDS IN U. S.

New York, Oct. 28.—England's "prettiest girl" is here to study music for four years at least, perhaps eight, before these visions could begin recovering.

This country is to see Lloyd George, ablest man in Europe. From the Cunard pier on Thursday he will sail on the Aquitania November 5 and go back on the Carmania December 3. Twenty staterooms and "de luxe suites" will be occupied by Lloyd George, and "stenographers, typists, guards and valets."

It sounds almost as grand as Charlemagne, starting for Jerusalem.

The Chicago Herald and Examiner runs a photograph of a "flying tank" protected by armor, carrying thirty machine guns to rain down bullets on marching troops. How long would it take such flying machines to drive infantry or cavalry off the face of the earth? A Birthday, and a Moral
The Detroit Twins
Horace Was Excited Also Married Women, Go Home

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921.

Yesterday was Theodore Roosevelt's birthday. Many remembered it and visited his grave. How many now remember the birthday of McKinley? Among a hundred million, how many even know where he was buried? The world forgets rapidly. You must do something striking to prevent it.

Americans die too soon. Roosevelt would have been sixty-three years old yesterday, the age at which a man should begin his serious work. He overtaxed himself, destroyed himself in the effort to gain health, submitting to severe physical training in hot weather.

He forgot that the heart bears all the strain, and should bear no strain after fifty. At sixty-three Gladstone, Pope Leo, von Moltke and scores of Europeans had hardly begun their work. They used the brain without limit and the body temperately.

On a ferryboat that runs across the narrow water from Detroit to Windsor in Canada, twins were abandoned in a basket.

Next day the mother wrote to the authorities: "I want my babies, to take care of them. I will do anything if you promise not to put me in jail." They said they wouldn't put her in jail, but she couldn't have the babies, and she must tell the name of the man responsible. Then the man got hold of the young woman and kept her from the children. His sacred name must be preserved from scandal.

Which is better, the man whom such scandal does not really hurt and shirks his responsibility, or the woman who is ruined for life, but accepts the penalty?

Not far from the twins, ladies and gentlemen were vigorously investigating "spirit phenomena," trying to make ghosts come back and talk. The twins in the basket, two little ghosts just born from nowhere, wanted somebody to take care of them, and nobody was interested except the authorities, who said the mother mustn't have them.

M. S. Pittman tells teachers of Michigan that American home life is dying, its sanctity passing.

Elinor Glyn goes back to Europe shocked by the morals of our young women.

This from the lady that wrote "Three Weeks" is a serious warning.

However, don't be discouraged. The home is always passing, women are always going to perdition, dress is always immoral, and some one thinks civilization cannot last.

Horace wrote a little poem centuries ago entitled, "Ad Romanoffs." It starts with the statement that contempt for religion and corruption of morals had brought misfortune on Rome. It complained of immoral dances, "the virgin marriageable, delights to be taught the Ionic dances immodest, and clothes unchaste desired from her very infancy."

Not even Elinor Glyn found this condition among our young ladies.

The committee on lack of employment in Detroit asks manufacturers to discharge employed married women if their husbands are working. The theory is that with so many out of work, two jobs is too many for one family.

That may be a wise way to settle it.

It seems hard, however, to say to the married woman whose husband happens to be working that she must lose her job and go home. If a father and son were working in the same bank, both would be startled if one were ordered to quit and give some other man a chance at a banking job.

Will railroads stop and the men walk out on Tuesday? This writer, starting for Mexico tonight, thinks not. There is such common sense in two million and a half of workmen.

To drop so many steady jobs with so many idle is not the way to preserve wartime wages.

It is the way to break railroad unions, unions that stabilize wages and keep alive the public buying power.

Once broken down, it would be one, four years at least, perhaps eight, before these unions could begin recovering.

This country is to see Lloyd George, ablest man in Europe. From the Cunard pier on Thursday he will sail on the Aquitania November 5 and go back on the Carmania December 3. Twenty staterooms and "de luxe suites" will be occupied by Lloyd George, and "stenographers, typists, guards and valets."

It sounds almost as grand as Charlemagne, starting for Jerusalem.

AUTOPSY HELD ON THE BODY OF SEARLES

Methuen Police Guard Estate as Action Is Taken by District Attorney

Meth., A. Oct. 28.—The long heralded autopsy on the body of Edward F. Searles, Methuen millionaire recluse, was conducted here today, as exclusively forecast in the Boston American.

Behind the walls of the great estate, closely guarded by cordons of Methuen police, the body was taken from its crypt and the internal organs analyzed for trace of the poison hinted at in anonymous letters to District Attorney S. Howard Dunnell.

SECRECY ATTEMPTED.

Kept as close a secret as have been all of the proceedings since Dunnell took charge of the proceedings, the fact that the autopsy was at last to take place would not have been known had it not been for the presence of newspapermen about the estate.

Early in the day the crypt in the chapel of Pine Lodge, that Searles had built to contain his body and his wife's was opened. When Medical Examiner George W. Dow of the Lawrence district arrived it was taken out and placed on a table.

Shortly afterward, George H. Magrath of Boston, medical examiner for Suffolk County, representing the district attorney of Essex County, arrived, and the autopsy was commenced.

UNDERTAKER IS WITNESS.

Edward Canley, representing the town of Methuen, was present, but aside from these three and Dr. Magrath's stenographer, no one else was in the room when the body of the multimillionaire was laid open by the probe's scalpel.

J. T. Douglas, undertaker in charge of the Searles funeral some two years ago, identified the casket as that of the millionaire.

It had been expected that Dr. Victor A. Reed, personal physician to Searles and assistant medical examiner, would be present, but at the last minute he did not appear. It was said that he had not been invited to be present.

As mysteriously secret as was the private life of the millionaire himself were the proceedings today. Since the first of the investigation District Attorney Dunnell has clothed the proceedings with mystery, refusing all information as to what the autopsy would take place.

REVERE POLICE INVESTIGATE ATTACK ON BOY

Man Who Applied Hot Iron to Child's Hand Is Sought by Officers

Screaming with pain and holding up a tiny fist bearing the livid brand "C-1," evidently inflicted with a hot iron, three-year-old Frank Quarantiell ran to his mother and sobbed out a strange story of an attack of unprecedented ferocity at the hands of a strange man in Revere.

The boy lives at No. 7 George street, Revere. Police are investigating his story and looking for his assailant.

He toddled out of his home with a penny clutched fast, intent on purchasing a stick of candy.

He had been gone but a few minutes when his screams alarmed his mother and she looked out the window to see him racing home.

The penny was gone. The brand was on the back of his right hand. Besides the "C-1" mark, there was a small mark beneath.

The boy said the "strange man" got off a street car, came directly toward him and, seizing his right hand, branded him.

One theory is that a feud may be back of the ferocious assault upon the baby.

Another is that "the strange man" may be some half-grown boy of the neighborhood with the cruelty that sometimes is found in weak-minded youths of that age.

Little Frank will bear the mark all his life, the police say.

COURT REFUSED PELLETIER PRELIMINARY HEARING

'STRIKE OFF' ORDER TO R. R. MEN

Messages Flashed in Code to All Parts of the Country

Chicago, Oct. 28—(By the Associated Press.)—The official recall of the rail strike orders issued by the switchmen, trainmen, conductors, engineers and firemen was dispatched today when leaders of the "Big Five" flashed code messages to their general chairman.

The chairman will submit the messages to the locals and the official order recalling the strike will thus reach all parts of the country in a few hours.

Similar orders were dispatched today by the telegraphers' organization, the only other union that had voted to participate in the strike scheduled to begin Sunday.

While these orders are being circulated, the United States Railroad Labor Board, which played an important part in the final decision of the union, announce its findings as a result of the public hearing Wednesday at which union leaders and railroad executives testified.

This declaration, it was expected, would analyze the situation and its outcome, the board, according to one member, feeling the matter was now out of its hands.

Railroad brotherhood chiefs said today that their resolution adopted calling off the strike emphasized two points as evidence of avictory for the men.

These points were, first, that action of the Railroad Labor Board on further wage cuts that the railroads may see will receive consideration only after pending questions before the board are cleared, thereby postponing the question of a new wage revision for nearly a year. The second point was that action on rules, which the organizations wish to maintain, likewise would take its place on the regular calendar of the board, the question not likely to become an immediate issue.

Hundreds of congratulatory telegrams camt to the board's offices. John Higgins, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, called to congratulate the members in their success in averting the strike.

WAGE CUT DELAYED.

The vote ending the strike came late last night, after all-day sessions of the six leaders. Early in the day general chairmen of each of the five organizations conferred separately. In the afternoon a joint session was held which was addressed by Gen. W. Hooper of the Labor Board. Mr. Hooper's appearance before the board is said by union leaders to have clinched the turning point which led to the final decision.

Mr. Hooper is said to have stressed the board's announcement that no further wage cuts for any class of employes would be considered until working conditions for that class of employes have been settled. He is also said to have emphasized the announcement of the rail executives made at Wednesday's hearings that no changes in either wages or working conditions would be sought except through the Labor Board, as provided by law.

Union men said they construed Mr. Hooper's remarks as indicating that nearly a year must elapse before further wage cuts could be made effective, even if the roads should

PERSHING FIRST TO ARRIVE

General Reaches Port in Time to Welcome Marshal Foch to U. S.

By Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—General Pershing today won another victory. Time was the vanquished.

Racing into port on the Hudson George Washington, the leader of America's forces in the World War reached Quarantine about 11 o'clock, in ample time to greet Marshal Foch when the allied generalissimo came into the harbor on the steamship Paris, escorted by American destroyers and seaplanes.

It was due to the ex-service men in the fireroom of the George Washington that General Pershing was able to get back in time. Responding to a wireless appeal from the American Legion the firemen forced raised additional pounds of steam.

After receiving an official welcome at Quarantine, General Pershing took his place in the great ranks of Americans who had risen early today to pay their tribute to the graybearded man who had led 10,000,000 soldiers to victory in the greatest struggle of all time.

Awaiting the Paris at Quarantine was the navy cutter Virginia with a band of notables, who were to escort the marshal to Battery Park and chance to City Hall to receive an official welcome from the city of New York before proceeding to the Pennsylvania Station on his way to Washington.

The Paris was delayed somewhat during the night by a heavy fog. The marshal was eagerly awaiting his first glimpse of New York's skyline. He arose and breakfasted early. Last night he departed from his usual custom of dining privately and attended the dinner and concert given for the benefit of the ship's seamen.

HAD ASKED SPECIAL SESSION

Chief Justice Rugg Denied Request Before Charges Were Formally Filed

District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier asked Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Supreme Court to grant him a preliminary hearing on the charges preferred against him by Attorney-General J. Weston Allen before those charges were formally and irrevocably filed, and the chief justice denied his request.

This became known today following the filing of the Attorney-General's charges against the Suffolk District Attorney yesterday and the concurrent demand for his removal.

Pelletier will make his initial appearance in the role of defendant before the Supreme Court November 14.

On that date various legal preliminaries will be straightened out and it is possible that a date of trial may be set.

Attorney-General Allen, in his uncompromising indictment of the Suffolk County prosecutor and Boston mayoralty candidate, left little to the imagination.

District Attorney Pelletier, replying to the charges, issued a public statement in which he branded the allegations, with one exception, as "the same old goblins which the bar committee have been sleeping on for four years," and claims they would have been allowed to slumber until next Summer but for the fact that he was a candidate for office.

He referred to Judge Goff's New York opinion in the Emerson Motor case "exonerating" the Suffolk District Attorney, but charged this "cannot be allowed to hinder the Union Club, the Good Government Club, the Good Government Association, the Watch and Ward Society, the Bar Association and the Loyal Coalition, operating through their tool, the Attorney-General," in their determination to defeat him for Mayor.

PELLETIER TO ANSWER ALLEN'S NEW CHARGES IN COURT NOV. 14

ACCUSED WITH DANIEL H. COAKLEY AND WILLIAM J. CORCORAN OF EXTORTION IN CONDUCT OF DIVORCE TANGLES

necting the names of Pelletier and Daniel H. Coakley with cases with which their names had not been popularly associated before.

Chief among these "new" charges were the two which follow:

1—That Joseph C. Pelletier conspired with Daniel H. Coakley and William J. Corcoran, then district attorney for Middlesex County, to extort a large sum of money from Curtis Wilson Emery, Elizabeth Emery and Jennie S. Chase under threat of criminal prosecution.

2—That Joseph C. Pelletier conspired with Daniel H. Coakley and others to frighten Albert T. Smith into payment of a large sum of money to his wife, Agnes Smith, a client of Coakley's, under threat of criminal prosecution.

Both these cases are celebrated, but they have never been exploited by Pelletier's critics before, as, for instance, the Emerson Motors cash.

The story behind the first of the two complaints involves a boy-and-girl love affair; the marriage of a poor boy and a pretty Webster heiress; lawsuits and counter suits in divorce; a question as to the paternity of a child born to the woman a second marriage.

The story regarding the Smith affair involves a wee fortune, its loss and fall; a divorce suit; bigamy, and a fee which it is alleged was of princely proportions to Daniel Coakley.

SUMMARY OF CHARGES.

Allen's charges against Pelletier are, in brief, as follows:

1—That Pelletier conspired with Coakley and others to extort $25,000 from the Emerson Motors Company, and that he permitted the making of threats of criminal prosecution against the concern.

2—That he conspired with Coakley to extort $16,000 from Warren C. Daniel, a securities broker, also under threat of prosecution.

3—That he forced Dorothy Cote to abandon a suit to recover an automobile by threatening to prosecute her, and that the car was released in favor of one Lawrence, a client of Coakley's.

4—That Pelletier nol prossed the case against Merrill W. Shute, charged with the embezzlement of $18,000 from Emma Brackett of Bangor, Me., and that he did so from improper motives; that he made false statements in the case.

5—That he failed to prosecute divers other cases; that he aided others to extort money under threat of prosecution.

6—That he conspired, as stated before, in the Smith and Emery cases, Allen's specific allegation in the Emery case is that in 1913 Pelletier aided Coakley to extort money from Elizabeth and Curtis Wilson Emery and Jennie S. Chase, her mother, and that he "did wilfully and unlawfully abuse the authority of his office and permit the same to be made the instrument of fraud and extortion."

This was about the time that Victor Papineau, divorced husband of Mrs. Elizabeth Emery, brought suit against Curtis W. Emery, her husband, and Mrs. Jennie Chase, her mother, charging that they had alienated the affections of his wife.

He sued Emery, who was in business in Boston, for $20,000, and named his former mother-in-law, who was the widow and heir of Frederick Chase, Webster mill owner, for $10,000.

The alienation suit, however, was only the climax to a series of legal actions between Papineau and the Emerys.

One of these actions was a peculiar one in that Papineau claimed that he was the father of a child born to Elizabeth Emery a month after her marriage to her second husband, Curtis Emery.

Daniel Coakley's name was not popularly associated in any way with any of this litigation and the charges against him in connection with it come as a distinct surprise.

WEDDING OF HEIRESS.

The Papineau-Emery story begins back in 1906, with the marriage of Elizabeth F. Chase, nineteen-year-old heiress of Frederick Chase, the mill owner, and Victor D. Papineau, seventeen years old, a clerk in a Webster grocery store.

The bride had been a pupil in the fashionable Hannah Gilman School on Commonwealth avenue. They were married at the Hotel Buckminster by Rev. D. P. Henson, pastor of Tremont Temple.

That was in 1906. By 1912 the bloom of the rose of romance had apparently faded, for Mrs. Papineau brought suit for divorce from her erstwhile boy bridegroom.

At first she claimed infidelity and named a Mary or Maisie Cleary of Boston and Medford as co-respondent. Papineau made a desperate effort to stop the action, and finally filed a counter suit, naming Curtis W. Emery of Brookline, later to be her husband.

RECEIVED CASH SETTLEMENT.

By mutual consent those suits were dropped, the husband receiving a cash settlement, as he later declared, not to push his charges. Later Mrs. Papineau tried again, this time bringing her suit in Worcester county and charging cruel and abusive treatment. She got the divorce.

Immediately afterward, as members of the family later told the story, Mrs. Papineau and Curtis Emery were married. Emery was manager of the Boston Law Association and Collection Agency, and lived in Boston. One month later a child was born to Mrs. Emery, and she named Frederick Chase Emery and hid mother tried in every way to disassociate him from Victor Papineau.

Not long afterward Papineau brought suit for custody of the child, claiming his natural right as the alleged father.

And several years later Papineau brought his alienation suits. What part Joseph Pelletier had in all or any part of this is not yet clear. Which of the various cases he is alleged to have tampered with, in company with Corcoran and Coakley, Allen has not as yet stated. That will be one of several questions which will probably not be answered until Pelletier makes his appearance cast in the new part of defendant.

THE SMITH CASE.

The Smith case is almost equally well remembered in Boston. In this case Allen charges that Pelletier, with Coakley, frightened Albert T. Smith, a High street wool merchant, into paying Agnes Smith, his wife, $87,500 alimony under the threat of prosecution.

It is further charged that Coakley entered into an agreement to take half of what he got from the husband as his fee and that such an arrangement constituted demanding an excessive and extortionate fee. The divorce proceedings began in December, 1918, while Smith still was prosperous.

It is charged that the payment of the alimony and the trouble that came upon him broke the spirit of the wool merchant, who in September of this year filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy for his company.

CONSPIRACY IS CHARGED.

Smith, then prosperous, married a pretty Chicago girl in 1918. In 1919 she brought suit for divorce, alleging infidelity. She said the co-respondent was a "person unknown."

Coakley was her attorney. Smith decided not to contest the action. While Allen did not specify further Pelletier's alleged part in the Smith case, the Bar Association's charges against Coakley in connection with that case read as follows:

"That said Coakley, employed by Agnes L. Smith to obtain a divorce, induced the said Agnes L. Smith to enter into an agreement with him providing for a contingent fee excessive in amount and out of all proportion to the value of any legitimate services which as counsel he could render in the matter."

The records of the court show that the alimony papers are impounded. Smith still is in Boston. Mrs. Smith is reported back in Chicago.

ALLEN DECLINES TO REPLY.

Allen today declined to reply to the charges by Pelletier that the proceedings against him are the result of a conspiracy hatched by Weston, the Bar Association and other alleged enemies.

He refused also to make response to Pelletier's accusation that the charges were brought at this time because Pelletier has become a candidate for Mayor.

Contrary to first impressions, which were indicated by Allen himself, proceedings were brought solely by the Attorney-General. The Bar Association does not appear in the document as a joint petitioner for Pelletier's removal. Allen decided to assume the entire responsibility.

Allen said he is not prepared to announce whether he will try the case himself or will bring in a special assistant attorney-general to assist him. Like Henry F. Hurlburt in the case against Nathan A. Tufts, deposed district attorney or Middlesex County.

He allowed it to be understood, however, that attorneys of the Bar Association may co-operate with his department in the prosecution of the charges.

Counsel Throws Light On Shute Charge

Some light is thrown on the Merrill W. Shute case, referred to by Attorney-General Allen in his list of charges against District Attorney Pelletier, by a copy of an affidavit made by George E. Thompson of Bangor, Me., counsel for Shute. The paper was taken from the office of Daniel H. Coakley. It is charged, by an agent of the Watch and Ward and figured in the "Coakley Stolen Papers case" last Winter.

Allen charges that Pelletier, from improper motives, nolle-prossed an indictment for embezzling $16,000 from an aged woman, Mrs. Emma F. Brackett of Bangor, which had been brought against Shute.

The affidavit asserts that Pelletier agreed to cancel the indictment after he learned that civil suits were also pending against Shute, saying, it is alleged, that in justice to Shute the criminal charges ought to be dropped.

Thompson, author of the affidavit, states in it that Shute came to him and informed him that he had been doing a brokerage business for Mrs. Brackett, and that her accounts were badly confused; that although she claimed he owed her money he felt that, due to the fact he had been in her employ she owed him as much if not more; and that her attorney was threatening him with criminal prosecution if he did not pay the money she demanded.

THREATENED WITH PRISON.

"He said that Patten (Mrs. Brackett's attorney) insisted they must get a large amount of money, approximately $20,000, at once, or they would have him sent to State Prison," continues the affidavit. "That Patten said if he didn't have the money he must get it from his wife. Shute told me that his wife had some property and that Patten said they'd rather give up her coin than give him up."

Following this, Thompson says in the statement, he was retained by Shute as attorney, while Shute was indicted for embezzlement.

"I went to Boston and had a talk with Thomas D. Lavelle, assistant district attorney," reads the affidavit. "I told him that it seemed to me that this was not a criminal matter at all, but the outgrowth of a marriage and according to my information there was nothing criminal in the transaction.

"I told Mr. Lavelle of the civil suits then pending, and he said that was his first knowledge of the civil suit."

Thompson went on to say that he was acquainted with Pelletier only slightly. He denied he had used any kind of influence to have the indictment nolle prossed and stated that he had spoken to Pelletier a few days before the indictment had been brought. He continues:

SEEMS HANDICAPPED.

"The next time I spoke to Pelletier was the day of the nol pros. I told him that so long as this indictment was pending Shute could not do himself justice; that he was certainly handicapped by the unjust indictment, which was obtained, I understand, on the unsupported testimony of Patten, before the grand jury and chiefly from them by the statement of an admission made by Patten that Shute was guilty.

"Shute always maintained that he was not guilty; that he might have owed her money, but that he had never stolen her money. Pelletier stated that he had a conversation with Lavelle and the atmosphere of the complaints certainly was not right and that if they had known about the civil suits no indictments would have been brought, and that in justice to Shute there should have been a nol pros entered."

The affidavit is dated June 10, 1919.

Declares Allen Would Not Have Brought Charges Only for Coming Election

"At last the Watch and Ward Society with Cabot, Allen, Weston, et al have filed their charges against me in court. Were it not for my candidacy for mayor this document would have slept until next Summer—about the time the campaign for district attorney would be commencing.

"I have not had time to read with scrutiny the very voluminous document. Enough I have seen to show that the charges, with one exception, are all the same old goblins with which the Bar Committee have been sleeping for the last three or four years.

"That exception is the Emery case, about which I will have something to say when I have time to look it over.

"The headliner is the Emerson Motor case. This charge originated in a trial in the United States Court in New York of the Emerson Motor Company for misuse of the mails.

"Because of a statement made by Osborne, Assistant United States District Attorney, after a conference with Godfrey Cabot, United States Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton referred the matter to the New York Bar Association.

QUOTES JUDGE GOFF.

"The New York Bar Association petitioned for the disbarment of Amos Stephens, a prominent New York lawyer, who represented the Emerson Company. It was Mr. Stephens who, in behalf of the Emerson Company, paid to Mr. Francis M. Carroll and Daniel H. Coakley the fee which has started the local commotion.

"Honorable John W. Goff of the New York Supreme Court heard the case. He heard the same witnesses and the same testimony upon which Allen and the bar committee of Boston ask for my removal. Judge Goff refused to disbar Stephens, and this is what Judge Goff said (quoted in part):

"'I find that the evidence before me is wholly insufficient to support or sustain the first charge that the respondent was guilty of misconduct as an attorney and counselor at law.

"'Further, there is absolutely no evidence before the referee that the money paid was improperly used. All the evidence there is before the court upon that point is exactly to the contrary.

"'That the respondent was bound to serve and protect the interests of his client by all the legitimate means within his power, can not be questioned. He did not create the situation which confronted him in Boston.

COAKLEY'S FEE.

"Mr. Coakley had a right to demand such fee for his services as to him seemed appropriate. There is a complete absence of evidence that the fee required, or any part of it, was to be used for improper purposes; indeed, there is positive evidence that it was not.'

"Whenever the Bar Clique have spoken in the press and elsewhere about the Emerson Motors case, they have taken pains to refer to it as having been initiated—not by them—but by Judge Manton.

"As a matter of fact it was Godfrey Cabot, coaching young Osborne, who produced the situation to which Judge Manton refers in the following letter to me:

"From Mr. Pelletier:

"'My attention has just been called to the report of Referee Goff in the matter of Amos H. Stephens, an attorney. Charges of unprofessional conduct were made against Mr. Stephens because of certain testimony which arose out of the Emerson Motors Company case. As I presided at the trial of the indictment against the Emerson Motors Company and its officers and others who were charged with fraud in the use of the mails, the result of the proceedings as to Mr. Stephens, I view with interest.

CHARGE UNTRUTHFUL

"'There was some testimony adduced at the trial as to the misuse of funds of that company and the insinuation that it was used for protection from prosecution in Boston. Mr. Stephens was the attorney named, and this gave rise to the proceedings against him. I am glad to be advised that a searching investigation before the referee established the untruthfulness of this charge and that it also releases you of all insinuation of official or moral wrongdoing.'

"The sole witness in New York against Stephens, and before the Bar Committee against me, was one Robert P. Matches, then convicted, and now doing three years at Atlanta.

"Judge John W. Goff of the New York Supreme Court will not suffer by comparison, as to moral character and legal ability and standing, with the bar clique and Attorney-General Allen.

"But the opinion of Judge Goff, exonerating me, of which the attorney general is well aware, cannot be allowed to hinder the Union Club, the Goo Goo, the Watch and Ward Society, the bar clique and the Loyal Coalition, operating through their tool, the attorney general, and any one else they can influence in their determination to defeat me for mayor."

The affidavit is dated June 10, 1919.

POSTAL CLERK IS HELD FOR THEFT

Son of Wealthy Springfield Contractor Arrested After $2,000 Shortage Is Found

Springfield, Oct. 28.—Frank J. Riley, thirty years old, a clerk in the Springfield postoffice, and son of John D. Riley, wealthy selectman of West Springfield, is being held in bonds of $2,000 to answer to a Federal grand jury on charges of embezzlement of $2,000 from the postoffice funds.

Riley was arrested on a secret warrant on September 23 last but the fact that the charge had been placed against him was not made public until today, when he was arraigned before United States Commissioner John L. Rice. He waived a hearing.

Employed in the postal savings of the local office, Riley was a member of the department for many years. During the last few months postal inspectors have been making their regular check-up on the office accounts, and it was their discovery of the alleged shortage that resulted in his arrest. Postmaster Thomas J. Costello has suspended him from his position.

Attorneys for the defendant announced today that his father, who is a contractor, has already made restitution to the amount of $4,400. Upon this announcement a buzz of conjecture was immediately begun.

He is only charged with having taken $2,000, and no reason can be found for his having repaid more than twice that sum. His attorneys refused to comment on or explain their statements.

Riley has been living at No. 466 Westfield street, West Springfield. In addition to being wealthy, the Riley family is extremely prominent socially.

Friends are utterly unable to find a reason for the alleged embezzlement, rejecting out the story. Riley has always been plentifully supplied with funds by his father.

While the vote by organizations was said to have been unanimous, [illegible] asserted today that the vote in the various unions was close and that the firemen, in particular, long remained undecided.

The final decision seemed pleasing to union men, rail executives and the Labor Board alike. Union leaders pointed out that they had determined that they could not strike without opposing both the Labor Board and the administration, while they asserted their real quarrel was with the roads.

EXECUTIVES PLEASED.

Railroad executives expressed satisfaction over the decision while members of the Labor Board characterized the action as one that would will never regret and which has averted inconceivable hardship and an internal industrial dispute.

Labor chieftains today asserted that their victory yesterday marked the end of all danger of a strike as the result of the action taken by the unions. no walkout now being effective until a new vote is taken.

No plans are being made for a new strike ballot, W. G. Lee, chief of the trainmen, said.

Complete plans to avert the most serious handicap of a strike have been made by the government, District Attorney Clyne made known today.

Application for injunctions restraining the brotherhood chiefs from carrying out the strike, with orders necessary to conduct these proceedings, were in the hands of District Attorneys throughout the country ready to be presented in Federal Courts.

The applications were drafted by Attorney-General Daugherty at a conference with five district attorneys earlier in the week and followed closely those drawn by Attorney-General Richard Olney in 1894 for the injunction issued in July of that year restraining Eugene V. Debs and other officers of the American Railway Union from interfering with transportation of the United States mail, Mr. Clyne said.

The government program included two actions to prevent delay in transportation and a third looking to the punishment of strike leaders through indictments for conspiracy against the public.

These were to be presented to the court twenty-four hours before the time the strike was scheduled to begin.

"Art is long; life is short," read one of the code messages sent out by the union chiefs. Some of the others were:

"Pretty heavy for such light work."

"Where there are two there is honey." Smith is a mighty man."

"Your accounts have been audited and found correct." "More enduring than brass."

The code message calling off the railroad strike has not yet been dispatched to the international & Great Northern trainmen who went out last Saturday. The calling off of the strike was deferred pending determination of their opportunity to return to work.

He will have as aides M. Corbin, for a long time head of the Foreign Affairs Press Bureau, and Francois De Tessan, a prominent French writer.

TRIAL OF LOUD FOR MURDER EXPECTED TO START IN DECEMBER

STATE WILL BE READY THEN

At least three women, one of them very prominent in Melrose social circles, are expected to be called as witnesses in the trial of Clarence W. Loud, of Melrose, who is charged with the murder on April 9, last, of Patolman James A. Preston of Wakefield.

The trial according to the present plans of District Attorney Endicott Peabody Saltonstall of Middlesex County, will probably begin during the first week in December.

District Attorney Saltonstall says that he has been working on the now-famous case since taking over the office of former District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts, and that he will be ready for the case on that week, and that all now depends on the health of John P. Feeney, senior counsel for Loud. Feeney has been ill for some time past, and if his health does not improve before the first weeks in December the trial will probably be delayed.

HAD ENTERED LOUD'S NAME.

It was on the night of April 9, last that Patrolman Preston was shot and killed in a lonely spot on the Lowell road, Wakefield, near Lake Quannapowit. He was shot four times, the bullets pierced his heart, head, neck and wrist. The officer was in full uniform and his body was found by one Fred Libbey, lying beside the road.

In the pocket of the dead officer was found a slip of paper on which was written the number of Loud's auto license. In his note-book was an entry charging Clarence W. Loud and a woman named Alice Dennett of Hudson street, Somerville, with a statutory offense. It was dated April 9, and the time was entered as 9.15 p. m.

The body of the policeman was found a short time after the murder is supposed to have occurred, and later in the night the Ford Sedan of Loud was found near the Saugus line abandoned. Loud was questioned by the police late that night and was then arrested on a charge of murder.

Followed an investigation that brought to light witnesses who declared Loud had been seen in the vicinity of the murder that night with a woman in his car.

Loud protested his innocence. He said he had been out in his car and had been robbed by bandits. He exhibited a bruise which he said the bandits had hit him on the head.

SEARCH FOR WOMAN.

Then started a hunt for the "mystery woman" who is supposed to have been in the machine with Loud, and who the authorities believed would be able to tell all about the shooting. The search for the woman led through many channels, and the names of three women were mentioned. These women were: Mrs. Kate Dow of Melrose, wife of Carl P. Dow, and daughter of former Mayor Adams of Melrose; Mrs. Ellen Gibson of Boston, and Dorothy Smith of North Cambridge.

All three women were said to have been friendly with Loud and to have ridden with him on his car at various times. But all three stoutly denied that they had been with Loud on the night of the murder.

Considerable talk of a letter was caused in Melrose social circles when the authorities persisted in linking the name of young Mrs. Dow with that of the accused shoe salesman.

HAYS IS HURLED FROM BERTH IN RAIL CRASH

Postmaster-General and Others Hurt When Express Hits Local Train

By Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—Postmaster-General Hays and a score or more passengers on the midnight express of the Pennsylvania line for Washington were badly shaken up early today when the express crashed, in a heavy fog, into the rear of a local train at the Manhattan transfer in New Jersey.

Pennsylvania officials declared there had been no serious injuries, although Mr. Hays expressed fear that Rush Simmons, chief inspector of the Post-office Department, who had been here with Mr. Hays investigating the $1,500,000 mail robbery, had been more seriously hurt than this report indicated. He said he saw Mr. Simmons being treated at Manhattan transfer and that he appeared to be severely hurt.

Mr. Hays and a number of other passenger on the express were brought back to New York on an inbound train. A physician who examined the Postmaster-General said that aside from some strained muscles and a general shaking up he had suffered no harm.

Describing the crash, Mr. Hays said he was just dosing off in his berth when he felt a shock which hurled him to the floor. Several others in his car also were pitched from their berths, he added.

Slapped and Kicked Her, Newtonville Woman Tells Judge While Seeking Divorce

Lieutenant Commander G. B. Gromer, commanding a United States torpedo boat destroyer, attached to the Pacific squadron, according to the complaint in his wife's suit for divorce, filed in Superior Court before Judge Burns, and upon which decision has been reserved:

Kicked his wife in the stomach.

Slapped her face and arms.

Held her nose while he forced her to drink cocktails.

Made a "disgusting" scene at a dance in South Carolina, which wound up in a fist fight with another man who had been attentive to Mrs. Gromer, and

Is the victim of "gross and confirmed habits of intoxication."

Mrs. Gromer was Eleanor Elsie Harris, daughter of Samuel C. Harris, of No. 201 Newtonville avenue, Newton, when she married Ensign Gromer on January 31, 1918. He was twenty-three and she was just twenty-two.

She was a graduate of Newton High School, class of 1916, and of the New England Conservatory of Music.

For a time after their marriage, Mrs. Gromer declares in her complaint, their life together was happy, but soon she began to notice that her husband was overly fond of intoxicants.

After he was ordered to the Charleston, S. C., Navy Yard for duty, he began drinking heavily, she alleged, and on the occasion of a dance at which she led the grand march with Governor Manning, then chief executive of the State, Gromer became noisy and troublesome.

He quarrelled violently with one of her partners, the wife testified, and at last dragged the man out of doors, where the was a furious fist fight.

It was after this scene that her husband fell into the habit, according to Mrs. Gromer, of slapping her.

She left him, she says, unable to bear him any longer, but later decided to give him another chance and went to San Francisco, where he was stationed.

There the marital troubles recommenced almost at once. He turned upon drinking at least one and frequently more cocktails before dinner and a number afterwards.

Often, she admitted, she tried to drink the things when he attempted to force her, but was unable to do so. He persisted and on more than one occasion held her nose and tried to force the liquor down her throat.

The climax to her unhappiness came, she testified, when Gromer kicked her. Then she left him for good.

On cross-examination Mrs. Gromer denied having written to a friend in Boston asking her to come through her mother was sick, as an excuse for leaving San Francisco and coming back to Boston. She admitted, however, having told her husband that Mrs. Harris was ill.

While in Boston the Gromers lived at No. 54 Charlesgate East and No. 317 Huntington avenue.

BRIBE CHARGE DENIED BY THOMPSON

Accused Court Officer Pleads Not Guilty and Case Goes Over to Nov. 11

Daniel Thompson, a court officer in the Seventh Civil Session, living at No. 16 Myrtle street, Jamaica Plain, pleaded not guilty before United States Commissioner Hayes today to a charge of soliciting and accepting a $200 bribe on the promise of influencing a jury.

His case was continued to November 11, and bail was set at $1,000. This was furnished. Leo A. Rogers appeared as counsel for Thompson.

Harris Poorvu of Tremont street, who swore out the complaint against Thompson, said Thompson had approached him with an offer to "get a verdict ranging from $3,800 to $4,300 for him, in consideration of $200."

The case was said to have been one in which Poorvu sued Henry F. Morrison to recover two notes, one for $4,200 and one for $1,000.

The solicitation, Poorvu said, occurred in the Federal Building.

FIGURES IN BLASTED ROMANCES

Three Bridegrooms and One Bride Are Greatly Mystified By Strange Disappearances

By HAZEL CANNING.

When Mary Helen Powell, bride, stood in church and promised Joseph Kocherga to love, honor and obey him, till death did them part—why—probably, Joseph thought Mary meant what she vowed.

When Mary, a few hours later, slipped away from her husband, Joseph received the surprise of his thirty-four years.

Now Mary Helen Powell, by book and background and setting, is just a young woman of the people, not over versed in Shakespeare and the musical classics. She acts, probably, from simple instinct.

But the impulse, in brides, to run away, by the history of human nature and of news in this New England of the last few years, does not confine itself to brides of untutored ways and simple thinking. For down in Connecticut, just recently, when Nora Johnson Kettelle, Radcliffe graduate, young woman tutored in the lore of one of the oldest families in the country, with a smiling face bade her young husband good-by, why, young Kettelle was happy in his leave taking. But when, a few hours later, he found that his young bride had taken her departure for that place from which "no traveler returns," then, probably, Kettelle was not quite as mystified as the other bridegroom, Joseph Kocherga.

Each told press and friends and public, "I know not why she went." And each, mystified, might join hands across the miles and the barriers of differing education and environment with a much older bridegroom, Ezra H. Setton, Attleboro. For Mrs. Setton, bride of a few days, has also mysteriously disappeared, leaving no word behind.

Now Ezra, leaning over the counter of his country store, in accents quite as fraught with emotion as those of his youthful contemporaries, Kettelle and Kocherga, shakes his kindly head and says: "I know not why she went. I cannot believe she went willingly."

These three bridegrooms, deserted in the early days of the honeymoon, might regard, with inquiring interest, youthful Mrs. Florence Girardin Keys, Harvard Club elevator girl bride of sixty-year-old "Romeo Keys," who, poor lady, has traveled, also, the road of mystifying, honeymoon abandonment.

"He never lived with me a whole day," Mrs. Girardin told the court just a little while ago. "He left me at 1:30 in the morning, the first day we were married."

Mystifying, unexplained by the principal parties, swift and silent, brides and the bridegrooms, before the words of the marriage service are hardly said, leave taken their abrupt departure. To be sure, the sisters of young Mary Helen Powell, 19 years old, summons up a reason, which they think is the one.

"Our sister," they say, "didn't want to marry this rich man—Joseph Kocherga—this rich old man of 34." The marriage was forced upon her.

For so 34, to the eyes of 15 and 17, is very aged indeed. But the young Mary Helen, bride and sloper—with the other lover, leaves behind her no explanation.

A COMMON IMPULSE.

"The colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady are sisters under the skin," Kipling told us years ago. Which seems to have been proved once again, in unexplained departures of brides of 1921. For, if simple Mary Helen chose life, and the other man, in departure more sensational than polite, the tutored Nora Johnson Kettelle, chose solitary death, in preference to marriage, about which they had taught her too little, in those days at Radcliffe when they expounded to her, Latin and sociology and modern economics.

Each girl, in her different way, Mary Helen, young woman of the people, and Nora Kettelle, young woman of the traditions, asserted her rights, in dramatic leave taking, the right of a free born young American woman, to throw off marriage which was distasteful, and to go back, bravely to meet one other lover, the other that death which was preferable to those bonds she had taken upon herself.

With the sloping bridegroom Keys, the story is different, but still mystifying. That is, if anyone takes it soberly, refusing to give an excuse the claimed eccentricity of the aged bridegroom. For, just a few years ago Keys made East and West resound with his preference for his elevator girl. He wanted, he tried, to marry her long before he succeeded. He gave lengthy interviews on how marriage, between an aging bridegroom and a simple, working girl was the only one worth while, from the point of view of eugenics, and the race.

PUZZLED BRIDEGROOMS.

"Such mothers as my Florence," said he, "have given to the world many noble children. I am proud that she has had to work, even as an elevator girl. I have education that will do for two."

This, because Keys is a Harvard graduate. And then—and then—after a few hours, Keys, as whimsically as a woman, left his young wife, and never went back to her. He now is suing—but before the end "Romeo" may find that defaulting bridegrooms are sometimes found financially responsible for their mystified young wives.

"The question, in the meantime, abides persistent, puzzling, unanswered save by the guess of the third party.

"Why did Mary Helen Powell run away?"

"Why did little Mrs. Kettelle choose, for herself, great death?"

"Why did Mrs. Laura R. Milot Setton leave her husband of a few days, whom she was in such haste to marry, so soon after her father's death?"

"Why did 'Romeo' Keys desert the bride for whom he had broken locks and traveled a continent to marry?"

"Why? We know not why," say the deserted bridegrooms and the deserted bride."

This, while the neighbors assign the reasons. In the meantime, be it written, the way of a man and a woman, buying, selling, building, voyaging, may be fairly well interpreted by the explainers. But the ways of a man and a woman—marrying—are beyond all explanation.

SHOWY WEDDINGS OF SOCIETY CONDEMNED

Showy weddings among the socially prominent were condemned by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Brent of the western New York diocese in an address before a large congregation in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul. "Churches ought to refuse," he said, "to allow the taking of the marriage vows to be used as a pious or sentimental framework for a vulgar or expensive social function."

CORNELL FILM DIRECTOR, IS SET FREE

Found Not Guilty of Making Attack on Anna Frances Tilley, an Actress

By Associated Press.

Herbert Cornell, the Brighton film director who has been on trial behind closed doors in Roxbury District Court on the charge of attacking Mrs. Anna Frances Tilley of Massachusetts avenue, a pretty twenty-four-year-old actress formerly in his company, was found not guilty by Judge Hayden in that court today.

The court at the same time dismissed a supplementary charge of a statutory nature.

Following his acquittal and exoneration Cornell became the centre of an excited group of his screen stars, eager to congratulate him.

His only statement was that he had been confident from the first of vindication.

Mrs. Tilley charged that Cornell attacked her in an apartment on Westland avenue, Back Bay, on or about July 2.

The picure in which Mrs. Tilley was engaged to play a part was written by George W. Galvin, founder of an emergency hospital, and was entitled "A Thousand Faces." She acquired to the vampire role, according to Cornell.

Among the witnesses who testified for Cornell and against her were Celeste Conant, who rehearsed the "vampire" role in the picture; Dorothy Lloyd of Brookline, who is playing "Miss Wynne"; Mrs. Mary L. Grant, "Barbara"; Mrs. Benjamin O. Lord, better known as "Sally Trask," who is playing he part of "Mrs. Dr. Phillips" Mrs. Catherine Patrick, who has a "mother" role; Charles M. Owens, the technical director of the scenario, and his wife, who plays the part of a "companion."

Muriel Harding of West Newton street and Laura Clark of Hemenway street, both of whom knew Cornell at one time or another, were among the witnesses for Mrs. Tilley.

Judge Hayden in disposing of the case made it plain that there was no doubt of the film director's innocence.

NIAGARA RIVER MURDER VICTIM IDENTIFIED

Believed to Be Kenneth R. Losey of Northport, L. I., a Wesleyan Student

By Associated Press.

Middletown, Ct., Oct. 28.—The unidentified body of a young man found in the Niagara River near Buffalo, N. Y., last night is believed here to be that of Kenneth R. Losey, class of 1923, at Wesleyan university.

Losey has been missing since October 13, when he parted from his roommate with the intention of going to New York City.

His home was at Northport, L. I., and his parents have been notified that the university officers believe the body found was that of their son.

When Losey left college he was accompanied by his roommate, W. E. Mansfield, of Danbury, Ct., to New Haven. According to Mansfield, Losey carried a Wesleyan watch charm, a small pocket Bible and $25 in money. On the body was a watch charm and a small Bible.

Losey was not heard from after leaving Mansfield at New Haven. Yesterday President Shanklin of Wesleyan received a telegram from Losey's parents, saying that they had not heard from their son in three weeks and inquiring for him.

Losey was well known among the student body and ranked high in his studies.

By Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 28.—Preliminary examination today of the body of the young man found in the Niagara River last night indicated that he had been thrown into the water soon after receiving a stab wound in the side and that the immediate cause of death was drowning.

The knife wound penetrated about six inches and took an upward course. The wound could not have been self-inflicted, the medical examiner believed. Neither the topcoat nor the inner coat of the victim's body had been stained, the first portion of clothing showing a cut being the vest.

The condition of the body indicated that it had been in the water but a week.

A fob attached to an open-faced gold watch bears the figure "23," in navy blue and maroon colors. Between the figures is a small seal, inscribed "Wesleyan University, A. D. 1831."

All the clothing on the body was of good quality and had been bought recently at a Buffalo store.

WIFE OF ALLEGED BIGAMIST BEATS HIM IN JAIL

Springfield, Oct. 28.—Clyde L. Fox, stock salesman, under arrest on a charge of bigamy and passing worthless checks, was soundly thrashed at York street jail.

Wife No. 2, who was Margaret G. Murphy of Mt. Vernon road, Dorchester, did the job. The young woman came here after Fox's arrest on the bigamy charge and thereupon made a bigamy complaint against him. Later she asked to see him and was taken to York street jail by Detective Lieutenant James T. Ralche. While Fox was tied from his cell the woman asked him why he married her. He refused to answer.

At that she sprang at him with the best thrashing of his life.

The woman was finally torn away from him and handed to the matron's ferocity of a tiger. Before jail attendants could interfere Fox got the room in a hysterical condition. Fox was returned to his cell where he requested he be left and visitors barred.

BEER IN PLENTY IS READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

Mellon Denies Any Delay Is Necessary; Breweries Are Overstocked

Washington, Oct. 28.—There need be no delay in supplying real beer to those who obtain doctors' prescriptions calling for it, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon said.

Contradicting reports that the establishment of the prohibition machinery would hold up distribution, Secretary Mellon added that the breweries of the country had large supplies of real beer for immediate placement on the market.

In fact it was these amounts of beer on hand which largely induced the Treasury to issue the long withheld regulations for medicinal beer and wine, he said.

With the waning of the market for soft drinks as Summer passed, breweries found themselves overstocked with the real beer from which the "near" product is obtained by dealcoholizing, Secretary Mellon explained.

These breweries had made no attempt before to force the issuance of the beer regulations, he said, but represented to him that in withholding the authorization now, they were being deprived of "a clear legal right imposing a serious loss."

The Treasury's position had been, it was stated, that issuance of the beer regulations, in the face of prospective early action by Congress on the Willis-Campbell anti-beer bill would only work to the disadvantage of breweries. They would set up expensive machinery for beer distribution and then have their work nullified by the expected legislation.

It is the function of the Treasury, Secretary Mellon said, to enforce the law without anticipation as to what changes may be effected by Congress. Therefore, the regulations were issued.

Treasury officials at the same time took occasion to deny that there is any friction between the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which exercises supervision over prohibition activities, and the subordinate prohibition unit.

Responsible heads of the latter organization have been instructed to make prompt and immediate provision for carrying out the beer authorization, and this will be done, it was asserted.

BREWERS WILL PRODUCE BEER IN A MONTH

Local Plants Must Wait Until Regulations for Making and Sale Are Received

If you are "sick" about a month from now and want some beer, you will be able to buy it. But in the meantime you'll have to try something else for your "ailment."

Local brewers said today that it would take "at least a month" before beer can be put on sale, and it may take longer.

New life has been taken on by the Massachusetts Brewers' Association with the announcement of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon that beer may be sold for medicinal purposes.

A dozen of the leaders in the association—heads of Boston breweries—met at the Copley-Plaza and discussed the new era that has dawned for them. It was learned at the meeting that stocks of before prohibition beer are practically nil.

"We can no nothing until we receive the regulations under which we may make and sell beer," said Thomas Maguire of Haffenreffer & Co., after the meeting.

"There is practically no old-time beer in Boston now and it will take at least a month before we can furnish a supply. In the meantime we are getting our breweries in shape to start operations.

"I don't believe there will be a tremendous demand for beer, though that depends upon what the price will be to consumers and restrictions that are placed on the sale."

X-RAY USEFUL IN DIAGNOSING TUBERCULOSIS

Determining White Plague Rests on Five Symptoms, Dr. Brown Asserts

What was declared to be the most comprehensive paper on the up-to-date diagnosis of tuberculosis was read by Dr. Lawrason Brown, of the Trudeau Sanatorium at Saranac Lake, N. Y., at the final meeting of the Institute of the Boston Tuberculosis Society at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

General comment among the 200 physicians and nurses at the meeting was unanimous in calling the paper an historic piece of work in the fight against the white plague.

FIVE SYMPTOMS.

"The diagnosis of tuberculosis," declared Dr. Brown, "rests mainly on five symptoms, none of which, however, are conclusive proof of disease.

"The most important of these is the presence of tubercle bacilli or germs in the sputum of the patient. These show, almost without exception, a tuberculous condition somewhere in the respiratory tract or lungs.

"The most important factor in diagnosis is found in the x-ray plate. If this shows dark areas about the spines, or upper parts of either lung, tuberculosis is probable.

"The third most important symptom is rales in the upper part of the chest. Rales are faint rasping sounds heard by the physician when the patient breathes. Rales in the mid or lower part of the lungs are not to be regarded by the physician as indicating tuberculosis.

PLEURISY A WARNING.

The two other symptoms are pleurisy and hemoptysis. Pleurisy is the inflammation of the lining of the chest and hemoptysis is the spitting of blood. If any one of these five symptoms is present, tuberculosis is probable.

"The remaining symptoms of tuberculosis are not so important. They include persistent cough, expectoration, dyspnea or shortness of breath, pain in the chest, hoarseness, temperature, increased pulse rate, night sweats, dullness and languor, loss of appetite and strength, and fatigue. There is also the tuberculin test, which bars tuberculosis when it is negative, but which is often positive when there is no active infection."

Several cases in which tuberculosis was not noted until after death were mentioned by Dr. Richard Cabot, professor of medicine at Harvard University. One of these was of a patient who came to the hospital complaining of stomach ache.

"We operated on his abdomen," Dr. Cabot said, "and found nothing diseased, although all his organs were thoroughly examined. Sometime later the patient died and on performing an autopsy, we found that he had died of tuberculosis, no symptoms of which had we been able to find."

X-RAY PLATE USEFUL.

How tuberculosis is recognized by the use of X-ray was explained by George W. Holmes, roentgenologist at the Massachusetts General Hospital. How these findings are correlated with those of the clinician was explained by Dr. John B. Hawes, director of the clinic of pulmonary diseases and president of the association.

Following Dr. Holmes' talk, several X-ray plates which he had never seen before were shown to him. Dr. Holmes pointed out the characteristics of each plate, and made a diagnosis on the basis of his findings there. Dr. Hawes then described the actual case and the true diagnosis as found by other means. In only a few cases was Dr. Holmes incorrect in his diagnosis.

"DANDERINE"

Grows Thick, Heavy Hair

35-cent Bottle Ends all Dandruff, Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes, but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.

WOMAN FRIEND OF ROOSEVELT PAYS TRIBUTE

Miss Robertson, Oklahoma Congresswoman, Speaks in Boston on Colonel's Anniversary

Tributes to the memory of the late Theodore Roosevelt, were offered by a distinguished list of speakers before the dinner held in the Hotel Somerset, by the Middlesex Club in commemoration of the 63rd anniversary of the former President's birth.

Miss Alice Robertson, Congresswoman from Oklahoma, related a number of personal reminiscences of Roosevelt, describing events in his life that she knew through personal contact with him.

"His men used to say of him what your boys said of General Edwards; they would have followed him straight into Hell, if he had led them there," she concluded.

Over 300 members of the club attended the banquet, which was presided over by Louis A. Coolidge. Included in the list of speakers, besides Miss Robertson, were Major-General James G. Harbord, acting chief of staff of the United States Army; Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Eliot Wadsworth; Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas W. Miller of Delaware, alien property custodian, and Josiah Kirby, Cleveland financial expert.

Kirby began with allusions to Roosevelt's life, but before he had finished he had given a survey of business conditions and prospects in America today.

"From now on the American people are going to buy," he said. "I firmly believe America is on the road to the greatest prosperity she has ever known."

General Harbord, in speaking of Col. Roosevelt's activities during the war, paid high tribute to the men of the Yankee Division, declaring he knew their valor personally from seeing them in action at Chateau-Thierry.

He declared that Colonel Roosevelt began making plans for war service as early as 1915. Although admitting that the selective service act, by which Roosevelt's plan for leading a volunteer division was thwarted, was the best way of raising an army, the general asserted that Colonel Roosevelt's presence in command on the lines in France would have been worth thousands of men to allies.

ESSEX TAXPAYERS TO AID COST OF HOSPITAL

A special meeting will be held in Ames Memorial Hall, Salem, tonight under the auspices of the Joint Special Commitee on County Government to allow the taxpayers of Essex County tuberculosis hospital at Middleton, which has cost well over $1,000,000 and is described as a "palace." Protests over the expensive character of the appointments of the institution have been made from all quarters, and it is charged that the Middleton sanitarium has already cost more than all of the rest of the county tuberculosis institutions combined. The building is not yet completed.

EPISCOPALIANS URGED TO PRAY FOR PEACE

Bishop Lawrence Calls for Special Observance of Nov. 11 and 13

Bishop William Lawrence of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts calls upon his ministers to observe Armistice Day, Nov. 11, and Sunday, Nov. 13, as days of special intercession "that peace and good will may be permanently established among all people of the world."

The bishop has sent the following letter to all the churches:

"The President has called upon 'all devout and patriotic citizens' to pause at twelve o'clock noon for two minutes on Armistice Day, 'for a period of silent prayer of thanks to the Giver of all Good' for hosts who laid down their lives in the World War, 'and of supplication for His Divine Mercy and for His blessings upon our beloved country.'

"The presiding Bishop and Council have asked the clergy and laity of the Church to observe Aristice Day and Sunday November 13, as days of special intercession to the Almighty God, 'that He will so direct and guide the minds and hearts of the representatives of the nations assembled in the conference at Washington that peace and good will may be permanently established among til the peoples of the world.'

"I therefore suggest that on Armistice Dal a Memorial service of special Thanksgiving and Intercession be held in all the churches at 11:45, including the two minutes of silent prayer, and that on the following Sunday the services and sermons lead our thought and hearts toward the purposes of the conference.

"I herewith enclose an Order of Service for Armistice Day, including prayers from which selection may be made and which I hope will be used from time to time throughout the meeting of the conference.

"May I remind you that Sunday November 6, is the day on which we observe the centennial of the missionary organization of the Church, when it may not be amiss to recall relations between the Missions of the Church and the high purposes of the conference, peace and god will among all nations."

TINY FRESHMAN AT B. U. GIVEN HIGH PLACE

Somerville Student Is Elected First Year Representative to All Girls' Society

All good things come in small quantities.

Such can be said of Grace M. Hinchey of Somerville, the tiniest girl in the freshmen class of the Boston University College of Liberal Arts, who was elected freshmen representative to Gamma Delta, the all girls' society in the school. Miss Hinchey is one of the youngest members of her class.

The feature of this society is that the president and vice-president must be non-sorority girls.

The remaining officers are as follows: President, Anna Fulton of Somerville; vice-president, Elinor White of Dover; secretary, Alice Curran of Rumford, Me.; treasurer, Helen Quigley of North Chelmsford.

Winifred Holman of Watertown is chairman of the room committee; that is, she restricts the girls to playing the piano for dancing during class hours. Helen Regan of Newton Highlands is chairman of Klatsch, the annual college celebration, commemorating some great event or discovery.

Other officers are Sadie Goldberg of Dorchester, auditor; Dorothy Hagan of Dorchester, junior executive, and Isabel Carey of Southbridge, sophomore director.

The annual convention closed with the re-election of Mrs. Ella Aldrich Gleason of Winchester as president. Other officers elected were: Mrs. Alice G. Hopes of Wellesley, vice-president; Hrs. Ada B. ## LITTLE ENTENTE TO DEMAND CHARLES

Ultimatum to Call for Former Emperor's Surrender Within Thirty-Six Hours

By Associated Press.

Prague, Oct. 28.—Former Emperor Charles must be surrendered to the Little Entente within thirty-six hours, under the terms of an ultimatum from the members of this combination of States, which it has decided to present to the Hungarian government in Budapest.

Deputy Mancich declared at a mass meeting held here last night that the ultimatum would be presented some time today.

The project of interning the former Emperor in either Czecho-Slovakia or Jugo-Slavia has been discussed freely by newspapers in this country.

Foreign Minister Benes has been in communication with the allied nations, as well as Rumania and Jugo-Slavia, relative to the steps to be taken as the result of Charles' attempt to regain the Magyar throne.

Charles Defeated When He Hesitated to Shoot

Budapest, Oct. 28.—Former Emperor Charles is believed to have lost the chance to occupy the Hungarian throne because of his unwillingness to order the bombardment of positions held by university students who barred his path at Badoers for two hours last Sunday morning. Hungary's fate hung in the balance during that time, it is asserted here.

The students had entrenched themselves along a ridge of hills and received forces supporting Charles with a hot machine gun fire.

Military leaders of Charles' expedition reported that the students' position must be bombarded, but Charles was loath to issue orders to this effect.

"I am sorry for the poor boys," he is quoted as saying. "Try to persuade them that resistance is hopeless."

Parleys began, but in the meantime government troops were hurried forward from Budapest, and occupied the ridge held by the students. As a result, it was found when Charles gave the order to attack that the battle was already lost.

Charles today issued the following terse message through the Associated Press correspondent:

"I was sure my people would offer resistance, so I gave orders to withdraw when the government troops opened fire. Nothing can persuade me to provoke civil war. I trust providence and the future will bring harmony between the Hungarian nation and its sovereign."

Charles and ex-Empress Zita were on their way to Tihany Abbot from Szterbany Cseille, where the erstwhile royal pair were captured after last Sunday's battle.

WORCESTER CHILD IS KILLED BY AUTO

Worcester, Oct. 28.—George Felch, seven years old, son of Hal A. L. Felch of No. 26 Greendale avenue, was killed almost instantly when struck by a limousine driven by Arthur Hall of Leominster. The accident occurred on West Boylston street, near the boy's home. Hall says the boy darted in front of the machine. The boy's father is a machinist in the B. & M. roundhouse.

Rogers were the speakers.

BATTLESHIP FLEET TO STAY WEEK AT NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., Oct. 28.—The battleships and operative divisions of the destroyer squadron are due back here tomorrow for a week's stay for material overhaul. Their officers will attend the War College. Admiral Hilary P. Jones, commander-in-chief of the fleet, has sent Harbor Master Luth to keep clear anchorages for five battleships, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, North Dakota and Wyoming. The flagship Despatch will tie up at the training quarters.

SCHULTE MAY HEAD BIG CIGAR STORE COMBINE

David A. Shulte, president of the Shulte Retail Stores Corporation, will be the president of the United Cigar Stores and the Shulte interests if these two great tobacco corporations are combined, according to a statement made by Shulte in New York. He denied the report that his organization, as reported yesterday, is to be absorbed by the United Cigar Stores. He admitted that negotiations are under way for a merger, but insisted that the Shulte interests will be in control if the deal goes through.

Do you realize, Mrs. Home Director, perhaps you are in a way responsible for High Prices?

The diagram at the top of this advertisement is very simple, but it deals a death blow at the dealer who endeavors to gouge his customer because his business has not grown in sufficient volume to enable him to sell at an equitable margin of profit. The Summerfield business, an enormous institution as furniture stores in America go today, regulates its margin of profit to pay but a legitimate return on its invested capital, consequently every Summerfield customer is in reality a stockholder in the store, because the extraordinary values which customers receive are nothing more or less than dividends on their invested capital in furniture. When thinking of furniture, and as an efficient director of your home you must think of it every little while, do not forget the telling argument at the top: "SMALL PROFITS AND LARGE VOLUME MEAN GREATEST VALUE AND HIGHEST QUALITY." Isn't it time you joined the constantly growing Summerfield family of happy home customers?

BIRTH CONTROL IS VITAL ISSUE, HAPGOOD SAYS

Hays Gives Attention to Laws That Prevent Knowledge of Subject, Writer Declares

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

Washington, Oct. 28.—When thoughtful people discuss the approaching conference they frequently come down in the end to one subject that receives but little attention from the general public. That subject is the limitation of population in the future in many countries as it is limited in France now.

The path by which this subject finds its way into the conversation is this: What is the strongest reason that makes Great Britain cling to her idea of controlling the world's seas, an idea that is one of the foremost dangers to peace?

What makes her instinct on that subject so strong is the fear of starvation. Her population cannot be fed by the island itself. Therefore her young men go out over the world, and control the undeveloped regions. Cut her off from the rest of the world and she starves.

So it was with Germany before 1914. Germany did not need her population at home. She had to feed a large part of it by importation. Her drive from Hamburg to Bagdad was caused by the need of trade, which trade means to her being fed by somebody else.

ARGUMENTS ON JAPAN.

Likewise with Japan. There are arguments about how near she has already approached to the danger point, but those arguments need not detain us, since if the danger point has not actually been reached it will be reached soon.

The population of China lives in continual dread of hunger. The Chinese believe that the more children a man has the more shades will worship him when he is long since dead. This ancestor worship makes against birth-control in China. If China developed industrially she may vastly increase her already dense population; then look out for new problems.

Such is the political aspect of the question of birth-control. Naturally it is not the aspect that most concerns a worker like Dr. Stopes, who is now in this country to tell us a little about her clinic in London.

Her interest is in the individual mother, her health, her happiness, her choice; in the in individual child, its choice; in the individual child, its choice, warmed and educated.

WELLS HAS WORLD VIEW.

But the world-point-of-view must be in the mind of a person like H. G. Wells when he writes:

"Our hopes of a civilised life for all rest entirely on the possibility of sane birth-control."

That is a strong sentence, and yet I have heard Englishmen in Washington, speaking of future peace, use language not less strong.

Many Americans are rather upset by the mere mention of such a subject. Some of these Americans have religious beliefs that bear on the topic. Perhaps they do not understand that nobody intends to force any thought or any course of conduct on any single human creature. Those whose religion opposes birth-control will in no way be intruded on. Everybody on both sides will be free.

Others think the whole subject improper. Many of those who think it improper will put their minds willingly on novels, farces, musical comedies, newspaper pictures in which the proprieties are safliqt.

The human mind is an extraordinary machine. One of its most extraordinary details is that it blushes so much more easily if a momentous subject is discussed with dignity than if anything whatever is treated with airy frivolity.

ONLY FROM PEACE ANGLE.

In this country, to be sure, it will be some time before we are faced with the importance of the subject from the point of view of the size of our population. In the meantime we are not concerned with size except as the populations of other countries threaten the peace of the world.

But we are concerned with the quality of our population. The argument of the birth-control people is that a poor woman, with scarcely enough earning power in the family to support two children in rags, ought to have the right to choose, if that in her wish, not to have thirteen.

Anthony Comstock was a busy gentleman. He did good, when he worked in some areas, but his ideas about decency rather ran away from him.

HAD LAWS PASSED.

Through his great energy he succeeded in having laws passed that put knowledge about birth-control in the same class as wilfully indecent writing.

Will Hays is an interesting figure in this government. He is not afraid to think, which is enough to make any official peculiar.

He is now studying the postal laws and regulations, to see which ones are more interfering than useful.

This queer person is giving open-minded attention to the laws that prevent knowledge of birth-control. It will be amusing to see what happens to Hays in the next ten years. For he is young still, and statesmen go

450 BOTTLES OF BEER SEIZED IN NORTH ADAMS

North Adams, Oct. 28.—Four hundred and fifty bottles of beer in four barrels were found in a barn in the rear of the State street Mansion House, opposite the police station, in a raid made by Federal Prohibition officers, headed by Harold D. Wilson of Boston.

The owner of the Mansion House, Owen W. Welch could not be located, but when found will be summoned to appear before the U. S. Commissioner. Raids at two other places were unsuccessful.

HAYWARD'S FRIENDS RAISING FORFEITED BAIL

Chicago, Oct. 28.—William D. (Big Bill) Hayward, former chief of the I. W. W., is not coming back to American territory and face trial, but will remain in Russia while the members of "his clan" will have to make up to his bondsmen the $15,000 bail he forfeited when he fled the country. ## STRANGE MALADY HITS NORTH SCITUATE, R. I.

Providence, Oct. 28. — Doctors here and in North Scituate are puzzled by the prevalence in the latter town of a mysterious malady which has stricken 300 persons thus far and is still apparently unchecked. The disease is said to be similar to the influenza, although as yet no fatalities have resulted from it. Sufferers are said to be overcome suddenly by dizziness, weakness and pains in the head and body. Doctors have been unable to discover the origin of the ailment.

CONFESSED STOUGHTON SLAYER HANGS SELF

Tying a rope made of sheets to a ventilator in his cell at the Dedham Jail, Adolphe Powskevich, confessed murderer of Leon Statkus, a former Stoughton poolroom proprietor, committed suicide. The body was found by Keeper Thomas H. Brennan.

Mrs. Annie Statkus, wife of the murdered man, now lodged at the same jail as an accessory before the fact, has not been informed of the suicide of her former "star" boarder, who lived at her home a year before the murder.

ONE ARREST AFTER TWO AUTOS COLLIDE

Two men narrowly escaped death or serious injury when their machines came together and overturned at the corner of North Main street and Forest avenue, Cohasset.

One was owned by the Round Brook garage of North Scituate and operated by Russell Wilder, and the other owned and operated by John G. Harling, No. 24 Ellsworth street, Everett. Both escaped with cuts and bruises.

Harling was later arrested charged with drunkenness and operating an auto while under the influence of liquor.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Women to Conduct Oriental Bazar at Copley-Plaza

By BETTY ALDEN

FOR those who feel the lure of the Orient, the Copley-Plaza Hotel on November 16 is the place, and the only magic carpet necessary is any every day conveyance which will bear them to Copley square on that date. The entire north corridor of the Copley-Plaza will be transformed into a brilliant Oriental bazaar. There will be one main "street," lined on both sides with little "shops" or booths, just as they are in Egypt or India, or wherever it is that they have them.

The main booth, of course, will be the one where all kinds of odd things from the Far East will be sold by a group of society women from Wellesley. In fact, I am told that any number of rare bits have been especially imported for the occasion, and this is but one of the many "shops" where the strolling purchaser may fill his arms and empty his purse.

One of the most palatable booths is the "old Concord jams and jellies" in charge of a number of prominent Concord women, including Mrs. George Minot Baker, Miss Eugenia Foss, Mrs. Russell Robb and Mrs. George E. Wolcott. A close rival of the jam and jellies will be the candy booth in charge of Mrs. Sullivan Sargent and Mrs. Charles W. Hodgett, which will abound in Jack Horner pies in the form of turkeys, pumpkins and any number of fancy shapes all ready for the Thanksgiving dinner. Besides, there will be the choicest of sweets done up in the most attractive fashion—perhaps to adorn the tea table at some debutante presentation.

The white elephant booth will doubtless find a horde of ready purchasers, for I hear that no end of rare antiques, works of art, Oriental embroideries and the like have been donated for this booth, which is in charge of Mrs. Carl Keller and Miss Eva K. Foster.

At other shops will be sold articles for bridal showers, Paris creations for the little folk, lingerie for the debutante, toys, all kinds of baskets, bags, pillows, practical gifts and food. In other words, there is something for everyone, and the bazaar, remember, is only one feature of the many novel things planned for Woman's Day, December 16.

Now that the more intensive part of the Simmons College endowment fund campaign is over, the Simmons College salvage shop committee is laying plans for a busy Winter at the popular shop at No. 97 Newbury street. This shop, as almost everyone knows, is kept open all the time by volunteer workers, for the most part prominent society women, who devote much of their time to raising funds for the college in the Fenway.

Recently the executive committee met at the shop to complete their plans for coming sales. This group of women is composed of Mrs. James J. Storrow of Boston and Lincoln, chairman; Mrs. Stephen B. Davol of Brookline, treasurer; Dean Emerita Sarah Louise Arnold, Mrs. John Bryant of Marlboro street, Miss Rose L. Dexter of Beacon street, Mrs. Horatio Lamb of Milton and Mrs. Edwin S. Webster of Chestnut Hill.

Already dates have been fixed for two sales, one on Wednesday, November 2, at which antiques will be sold, and another, a sale of jewelry, which is to take place just a week later. The dates of additional sales of furniture, books, clothes, hats and so on, will be announced later.

Today finds the busy group of women on their second day of duty "behind the counter" at Horticultural Hall, where a huge rummage sale is being held from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m. for the benefit of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy.

At the book table are Mrs. Carl Keller, Miss Marjorie Thayer, Mrs. Charles Sweet, Mrs. James H. Reed, Mrs. Frederic Tudor, Mrs. Bertram Waters, Mrs. Robert Dodge, Mrs. Edward Sturtevant and Miss Rosamond Reed.

Mrs. Chandler Hovey, who has charge of the children's table, is being assisted by Mrs. J. Ramsay, Mrs. M. C. Rust, Mrs. Arthur Little, Mrs. D. K. Snow, Miss Isabelle McClure and Mrs. William Whiting.

At the head of the shoe table is Mrs. William Bramhall who is receiving the assistance of Mrs. Charles Merriam, Mrs. Mortimer Seabury, Mrs. Joseph Seabury, Mrs. Henry Nickerson and Mrs. Archibald Monks.

Standing behind the hat counter, and in charge of it, is Mrs. Henry G. Lapham, while men's clothes are in charge of Dr. Arthur Gould; furniture and pictures in charge of Miss Ellen Dalton and Mrs. Marshall Fabyan; silver and jewelry in charge of Mrs. William Rogers.

The bundle and delivery table is headed by Miss Mary Lord, whose assistants are Mrs. Thomas Gorham, Mrs. Robert Seamans, Mrs. Talbot Chase, Mrs. William Claflin, Mrs. S. Weeks, Mrs. Charles Blanchard and Miss Ruth Lyon.

Miss Alice Sargent and Miss Edith Fisher have charge of the lunch counter, which is rather a novel feature for such an affair.

INSURANCE MEN PLAN TO HALT AUTO THEFTS

Local Surety Officials Discuss 'Partial Moral Hazard' Scheme Proposed in New York

Local insurance men today are discussing the proposed "partial moral hazard" plan suggested at a meeting of the Eastern Automobile Underwriters' Association held in New York to discuss means for meeting the enormous increase in the number of thefts of motor cars all over the country.

At that meeting it was declared that a loss of more than 2,500 cars east of the Mississippi river is expected in 1921.

The merits of the proposed plan for reducing the losses of the insurance companies have been under discussion here and in other insurance centres for some months.

DELAY DEFINITE ACTION.

The meeting decided to withhold definite action until the problem of lessening the hazard of theft losses could be more carefully studied.

The plan considered was virtually a modification of the customary partial valuation policy, which is practically the only form of motor car insurance written today by the large companies. Increased losses led to the virtual abandonment of the full valuation policy about three months ago. Under the existing partial or non-valuation policy the owner pays a lower premium than charged for the full valuation policy, but in case of accident or loss he receives the appraised value of the car, if wholly lost, or indemnity for that portion of it damaged, at the time of the accident or loss.

The new plan discussed retained the same general principles, but was also directed toward meeting the demand for lower insurance rates. Roughly, it provided that the owner consent to stand about 25 per cent. of the loss in return for a reduction of 30 to 35 per cent. in insurance rates.

HAZARD ON OWNER.

This method would place a substantial moral hazard upon the car owner and, it was felt, would also place a premium upon individual care. While about 75 per cent. of motor car owners are classed as careful, the existing high rates, it has been said, are due in a considerable measure to carelessness by the other 25 per cent. The plan will probably come before the underwriters again, and some modifications of the existing method is likely to be adopted before the close of the year.

The insurance companies believe that the total number of motor vehicles stolen or mysteriously disappearing in 1921 will total 3,500, valued at $7,500,000. That figure is based upon the average number of thefts up to the present time, which is about 288 cars a month, although the number for September, according to reports at police headquarters, was considerably higher.

The requirement of insurance companies that cars be equipped with approved locks, thereby qualifying owners for lower insurance rates, has not resulted in complete satisfaction, it was stated.

WORCESTER PROPOSES LINK TO MOHAWK TRAIL

Worcester, Oct. 28.—A road which will directly connect Worcester with the Mohawk Trail, and in consequence with the Lincoln Highway, will be established if efforts of a committee of prominent men from Worcester and surrounding towns are successful. The matter will be presented as a bill in the State Legislature shortly.

Mayor Peter F. Sullivan, President S. B. Woodward of the Chamber of Commerce and Fred S. Howard, president of the Automobile Club, all of this city, are serving on the committee as Worcester's representatives. The contemplated road will cover a distance of about 15 miles, running from West Boylston through Oakdale, West Sterling and Princeton, to connect with the State road at Westminster.

BURSTING TIRE BLOWS HOLE IN MAN'S NOSE

Milford, Oct. 28.—Richard McMullan of Ashland tried to remove a tire from a spare rim on the back of his machine in Holliston and as a result a hole was torn through the side of his nose and the bone by the explosion. Dr. A. R. Newhall treated the man, taking several stitches in closing the wound. The autoist thought he could save time by taking off the auto tire without first removing the air.

FILENE SEES BUSINESS HELP IN ARMS PARLEY

The limitation of armaments conference will help to restore business to normal conditions more than anything else was the opinion expressed by Edward A. Filene before the Boston City Club. He declared a successful armament conference would lead to agreement in other matters necessary to the well-being of Europe, by which an extensive market for the surplus products of this country would be brought about.

WORCESTER GIRL ROUTS ATTACKER BY SCREAMS

Worcester, Oct. 28.—Three ambulances, a surgeon and a whole squad of detectives and patrolmen were rushed to a yard at No. 37 Merrifield street when neighbors, alarmed by screams, telephoned to police that a murder was being committed. # Wells Expects to See New Chapter Written at Arms Parley

By H. G. WELLS.

New York, Oct. 28.—I consider it a great privilege to witness the meeting and deliberations at Washington, where I hope to see a new chapter beginning in the history of mankind.

I anticipate a complete revision of the hasty and disastrous decisions at Versailles, the establishment of some world-wide control of the present monetary and economic chaos, and the foundation of a new and more just and generous system of international relationships in which not merely the victors in the late war, but the Germans and Russians, the Chinese and all sorts of men may have a fair and equal prospect of service and liberty, for no justice or prosperity is possible in the world any more but world justice and prosperity.

'DAREDEVIL' OF MOVIES ASKS FOR DIVORCE

Young Accuses Wife of Being Unfaithful While He Was in Labrador

New York, Oct. 28.—"Daredevil Jack" Young, debonair hero of hundreds of screen romances and the idol of matinee girls, has brought suit for divorce from Irma Young.

Evidence collected by detectives working for the husband while he was "on location" in Labrador making one of his thrillers will figure in the trial.

Young and his wife are each twenty-four years old. She will make a desperate fight to keep her four-year-old son, whose custody her husband seeks.

Mrs. Young denies all the allegations of the "daredevil" actor and says she can disprove them.

Mrs. Young is living with her parents. She is not an actress. Young is living at his club.

TELEPHONE WORKERS HEAR NEW LOCAL PLAN

Warning against the perils of secession movements, Peter Collins, former secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, talked to a mass meeting of the telephone workers at Faneuil Hall last night. He declared it was a mistake for local telephone workers to break away from the organization and seek to obtain recognition of the American Federation of Labor. Under the new rules it was explained any body of ten or more workers for a telephone company will be chartered as a separate local no matter how many other locals there may be in the vicinity.

MABEL GARRISON IN STEINERT CONCERT

With Reinald Werrenrath Pleases Large Audience in Symphony Hall

Fifteen hundred music lovers were entertained in Symphony Hall, at the second of the Steinert series of concerts by Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano, and Reinald Werrenrath, baritone. The program of twenty-five songs included two duets. In addition, half a dozen or more encores were sung in response to the vociferous applause that greeted both artists.

The program included classic, semi-classic and popular numbers in German, French, Italian, Norwegian and English. That Boston music-lovers like a little dash of the popular in their evening's pleasure was clearly proven when Miss Garrison rendered "Go to Sleep, My Little Pickaninny," a negro melody sung by the hoi polloi twenty or more years ago. The applause that greeted this effort forced her to sing another encore.

Her best numbers were Schubert's "Die Forelle," Claude Debussy's "Fantoches," Mahler's "Wer hat dies Liedlein erdacht" and C. Saint-Saens' "Air du Rossignol." The last number gave her a good opportunity to demonstrate her voice to the audience. The florid runs in this number and a Norwegian song she used as an encore showed her voice off to good advantage.

Mr. Werrenrath's splendid physique assists in making him a favorite with the feminine side of an audience and last evening was no exception. The ladies tired themselves in handclapping so that he was compelled to sing several additional songs, including his old favorite, "Dona," and the other to the effect that they're hanging Danny Dever. He also sang a new solo by James H. Rogers, entitled "The Last Song."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

By FRIEDA DAVIS

TODAY the entire studio plant of the Universal Film Company is shut down during the funeral of little "Breezy" Eason, the child star of that company who died on Monday after he had been struck by an automobile in front of his home in Hollywood.

Eason was fast following in the footsteps of the famous little "Jackie" Coogan as a child star. He had done such striking work in several Universal features that he was promoted to stardom and had made three pictures under that arrangement, "Two Kinds of Love" and "The Big Adventure." Another film had just been completed but not yet released, "The Fox." In this Eason co-starred with Harry Carey.

These two were warm friends. When news of the accident reached Carey, who was forty miles away filming a scene, he rushed to the boy's home and Breezy died in his arms. The child was eight years old. His father is Reeves Eason, a director with Universal, and his mother is an actress, playing under the name of Jimsey Mayo.

"SHERIFF NELL" IS HERE

THE Bowdoin Square Theatre is dealing largely in personal appearances of movie stars these days. The newest to appear in conjunction with her screen self is Polly Moran, the "Sheriff Nell" of HS Mack Sennett comedies.

Miss Moran, formerly a Boston girl, is the same animated person off the screen as she is on and tells about her adventures in pictures with the same "pep" that she arrests a band of comedy bandits. Miss Moran is not new to the speaking stage, for she was a footlight favorite before she turned to the movies. She gives a vaudeville act, chatters and sings.

ALL-STAR ENGLISH FILM

WHETHER it is the new trend of American producers to make pictures with all-star casts that has prompted the British producers to follow suit or not is hard to tell. The Alliance Film Corporation of England is planning a screen version of "The Bohemian Girl" with an all-star cast in earnest.

Miss Gladys Cooper will be seen as Arline; Miss Ellen Terry as Buda; Miss Constance Collier as Queen of the Gipsies; C. Aubrey Smith as Devilshoof; Mr. Ivor Novello as Thaddeus, and Mr. Henry Vibart as Count Arnheim. These players are among the most famous and most popular in London today. Many of the scenes will be taken on the river Danube.

CAMERA CLICKS

JAMES RENNIE isn't worrying over the closing of the stage play, "Pot Luck," in which he has been appearing on Broadway because he was promptly snatched at by Samuel Goldwyn, who persuaded him to go out to Culver City and make a film. Mrs. Rennie, better known as Dorothy Gish, is still working on the Griffith set in "The Two Orphans," in which she will continue to work for about two months.

CECIL DeMILLE is planning to screen another Saturday Evening Post story on his return from a vacation abroad. The new one will be "Manslaughter." This story is of a young society girl who runs down a traffic policeman and is sentenced to a jail term. The action deals with the psychological effect the prison life has on her. The cast has not been announced as yet.

HUGO and MABEL BALLIN will leave for Spain the first of the year to get local color for their next production, "In Old Madrid."

MATT MOORE, one of the younger members of the Moore family, Tom and Owen, has finished work in The Cosmopolitan picture, "Sisters," and is leaving for the West coast to visit his mother for several weeks before returning to the Kilkey lights for his next picture not yet titled.

CONFERENCE ON ERIN OFF TILL NEXT WEEK

Commons Discussion of Lloyd George's Course to Precede Resumption

London, Oct. 28.—(By the Associated Press)—The Irish conference has been suspended until after next Monday, the day set for a discussion in the House of Commons of the government's policy in dealing with representatives of the Dail Eireann. Even the meetings of the committee representing the government and Irish delegations have been suspended for today and tomorrow.

According to information obtained at Sinn Fein headquarters today, however, Prime Minister Lloyd George and Lord Chancellor Birkenhead may meet Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins, the Irish members of the committee, on Monday.

Some of the members of the Dail delegation, anticipating a blank week-end, had arranged to return to Ireland tonight, but Mr. Griffith asked them to remain in London, lest their return be misunderstood. Moreover, he desired that the delegation should review together the whole situation, preparatory to Monday's debate in the Commons.

Sinn Fein circles were not apprehensive today regarding the debate, some of them saying it would serve to "clear the air," to bring out the essentials and enable them to see how far Parliament would authorize the Prime Minister to go. If they think this authorization should not extend far enough, they intimated the conference might be broken off.

The latest arrival at Sinn Fein headquarters is William Mellowes, a member of the Dail Eireann and one of the organizers of the "Easter Rebellion," who commanded the rebels in Galway and later escaped to America.

The couple will reside in the bungalow in which, as testified to at the trial by Julius Schutte, Julius and his father slept during the early part of the night of December 9, 1915, going from there to the Ball shack shortly after midnight and starting the fire.

DEATH CAR DRIVER RECKLESS, SAYS COURT

Worcester, Oct. 28.—Judge Clarke of Webster District court, in an inquest report filed in Superior Court, finds Alma Moge, driver of the car that killed Rosaire Giroux, seventeen-year-old Southbridge girl, guilty of reckless driving. It is alleged Moge was speeding in an effort to catch a bride and groom following a wedding.

HAVERHILL DRUGGISTS OPPOSED TO BEER PLAN

Haverhill, Oct. 28.—Local druggists are opposed to the plan of the Federal government allowing them to handle beer on prescription. Ten druggists seen all stated that the additional expense will more than offset any profits they can make and that their prescription and drug business will be injured.

THE DOOR SLAMS ON HAPPINESS

Poor Blood Makes Bad Health—Then Come the "Blues"

Once the vigor of red blood becomes sapped of its strength, the door to happiness is literally slammed. Weariness of body follows and it unfailingly engenders depressed thoughts. To be prepared and cheerless becomes a habit. After a time there is an almost fixed dullness in the expression of the eyes and a pallor to the skin. Days seem dull and dark and difficult. A sense of insufferable gloom pervades the spirit.

Then it is that Gude's Pepto-Mangan is the great help. It is a red blood builder. It puts red into the blood—increases the number of corpuscles which make blood rich and red. When the blood is restored to its natural healthy state, the sensation of well-being returns. Instead of shuffling along carelessly, there is the firm and springy step, the bright lusterful eyes, the clear complexion, identified with the strength and vigor of good health. The druggist has Gude's Pepto-Mangan in both liquid and tablet form.—Advertisement.

Says Doctor's "Answer" To Another Proved Blessing Beyond Estimate

Tells About Mentho-Laxene Home-Made Cough Syrup

Dr. Lewis Baker, known throughout the country as an advocate of pure medicines, received a remarkable letter from Mrs. Maud Nesbitt, 191 Harrison Ave., Venice, Calif., in which she described her mean as one of severe coughing, day and night, for a period of three months, without relief from physician's treatment, patent medicines or Christian Science. She writes after describing her intense suffering: "One day in reading the paper I saw your reply to a question 'Can a chronic cough be cured?' You recommended Mentho-Laxene. I bought a 2½ oz. bottle and began using it every time I felt the irritation to cough, and at once as I am living today—in two doses' time my cough was absolutely gone, and I have never had another one and it has been three years since I obtained such wonderful results. Also conditions and loss of a young man who had a terrible cough and screamed for help among his roommates and friends. Another case where Mentho-Laxene was benefited was in two months' time. These cases are not unusual and this 'cure' accounts for 1,000 barrels of Mentho-Laxene being used the past year. A small bottle of it makes a full pint of cough syrup. Directions for making and taking accompany each bottle.—Advt.

Fresh From Paris

Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France.

AS one of its choices for formal occasions, Paris presents the ermine wrap—this season, of course, it being a cape-wrap. The model sketched above is made with a wide turned-over collar, and the lower half of the cape is made separately and attached with gathered fulness to the upper section. Beneath it is worn a black velvet frock with surplice bodice and broad girdle across the hips, of self fabric with tasseled ends. Over the velvet girdle it posed a second narrow girdle composed of metal and jet links.

The Russian influence is apparent in a coatee of caracul trimmed with astrakhan and its matching turban. The coatee, which has a gilet of hunter's green velvet, is cut in a point at each side of the front and in the back, and the astrakhan trims all the edges, acting also as a collar.

One of the youthful Winter hats of black velvet is trimmed with soft metallized ostrich.

60 FRENCHMEN IN DELEGATION FOR PARLEY

Berthelot, Foreign Affairs Secretary, at Head of the Advisors

Paris, Oct. 28 (By Associated Press).—The French delegation to the Washington conference, as finally completed today, comprises four principal delegates, thirty-four advisers and experts, who, with stenographers and clerks, will bring the total number of the delegation to about sixty.

The advisors are headed by Philippe Berthelot, General Secretary of Foreign Affairs, and include M. Fromageot, noted jurisconsult; M. Cartenon of Premier Briand's personal office staff; Louis Leger, secretary of the French legation at Peking; M. Marcassin, an attache; F. O. Camerlynck, official interpreter for the allied Supreme Council, who acted in the same capacity during the Versailles conference.

The press service of the delegation will be conducted by Henry Ponsot, recently French Consul at Monaco, and an assistant to the allied high commissioner in Upper Silesia, who directed the affairs of the press for France during the war.

Doctor Whose Ideas Saved Children of Austria is Here

By Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—Dr. Clemens Pirquet, famous Vienna child specialist, whose simple "pelidisi" formula for computing degrees of malnutrition, enabled the American relief administration to pick readily the most undernourished children in Austria at a time when every ration counted, arrived today on the Adriatic.

He will deliver the Stillman course of lectures at Yale University this Winter.

The formula—working out of which required only a set of scales with measuring attachment, and a little mathematical calculation—was used to determine which of the 400,000 hungry Austrian children were most sorely in need of being included in the 80,000 whom the administration was able to feed at first.

CHARTER GIVEN SWIG FOR NEW ENTERPRISE

Tremont Plan, Inc., Can Practically Engage in Banking Business

Simon Swig's new $500,000 corporation, the Tremont Plan, Inc., was today granted a certificate of incorporation by State Commissioner of Corporations Henry F. Long.

So broad is the scope of the charter granted today that Mr. Long said Swig can practically engage in a banking business, the principal proscription being that the new corporation cannot advertise itself as a bank.

The charter allows the new organization to "buy, acquire, hold, dispose of, sell and deal in and make advances and loans on the pledges of bonds, promissory notes, evidences of indebtedness, etc."

It can act as financial, commercial, general or special agents of individuals, partnerships, corporations and voluntary associations.

Long says he has no doubt the new corporation can accept deposits against which the depositors can draw checks. He is in doubt, he said, whether it can accept savings deposits and issue pass books.

He said the articles of incorporation were drawn according to law, and he had no authority but to approve them.

The incorporators are Swig, who holds twenty shares of stock; Charles W. Levi, former deputy bank commissioner, who was an employe of Swig's bank, the Tremont Trust Company, when it was closed by the State; Benjamin Swig, Simon's son, who was treasurer of the Tremont Trust Company, and who is credited with 240 shares, and George L. Marshall of Somerville. Swig is president, his son is clerk and treasurer.

SAYS POLICEMAN TOOK WHISKEY TO SCHOOL

Springfield, Oct. 28.—Whiskey was furnished the guards and attendants of the Hampden County Training School, Feeding Hills, by a member of the Springfield police department, according to Mrs. Georgia A. Loomis, witness in the legislative probe of the school.

Much of her testimony was of a startling nature. She is the mother-in-law of Daniel J. Sullivan, school guard, and claimed to have her information from him. She named Lieutenant Ernest P. Marble formerly in command of the Springfield vice squad, as the officer who brought the booze. It came from the Hampden County jail in quart bottles, she declared. There was much carousing.

ACCUSES ASSISTANTS.

Mrs. Loomis also told of the manufacture of moonshine at the school. She said Assistant Superintendent Ralph W. Haskell made moonshine at the school and drank too much. This information also came from her son-in-law, Sullivan, she testified. Assistant Superintendent Arthur Sherman was named as the receiver of the jail whiskey.

Mrs. Loomis also testified concerning the sanitary conditions at the school and the treatment of the boy inmates. During cross-examination it developed that she and Sullivan were not on friendly terms. Objection to him as her daughter's husband was the reason.

WITNESSES IN FEAR.

Witness declared she had trouble with Sullivan before and after the marriage. At one time he threatened to kill her and burn the house, she said. Witness then launched into a lengthy recital of domestic strife and was stopped with difficulty. She declared Sullivan has a violent temper.

Three witnesses who followed Mrs. Loomis became panic stricken and started to leave. Deputy Sheriff Edward J. Leyden caught them and escorted them back. All declared they feared violence from Sullivan because their testimony affected him. The witnesses were Mrs. Mary Unschmann, Miss Mamie Harlow and Bill Hart of Feeding Hills.

Sullivan, on the stand, denied all charges. He said his mother-in-law had been responsible for their domestic trouble and had threatened to kill him. Sullivan's wife corroborated this. Sullivan characterized Mrs. Loomis' testimony as a means of "getting" him.

Sullivan testified his work consisted of athletic training of the boys. He admitted administering whippings but declared they were not severe and only on the hands. Witness said no objections had ever been made to his punishments.

Witness said he never saw any school attendant or official intoxicated. He knew nothing about whiskey or other liquor. Offer made on the premises was the only drink.

Mrs. Unschmann and Miss Harlow testified to seeing Sullivan in fits of violent rage.

LOCK BUTCHER IN ICE BOX AND LOOT TILL

Two Armed Bandits Get $65 in Bold Charlestown Holdup

Two armed bandits escaped with $65 from the cash register of a meat market at Warren and Park sts., Charlestown, after locking Akmederam Kassean, the proprietor, in the huge icebox in the rear of the store.

The two men entered the store as Kassean was about to close up for the day. One of them asked Kassean about some meat. As the proprietor opened the door of the refrigerator they slipped inside to get the meat. One man vaulted over the counter, pushed the door shut on him and stood the iron bolt into place, making him a prisoner.

The men, after displaying their revolvers to Kassean through the glass panel in the door, then opened the cash register. Going to it, they scooped up the contents hurriedly and slipped out of the store.

Firearms Unpacked and Put to Use by Mail Truck Drivers

By Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28—A consignment of firearms that lay unused in the New York postoffice when automobile bandits held up and robbed a lone, unarmed mail truck driver of $1,454,129 last Monday night, were out today doing duty on the persons of guards who accompanied similar treasure trucks through the city's streets.

One of the first things Postmaster General Hays discovered upon his arrival here to take charge of the investigation of the robbery was that a large shipment of guns sent to arm New York postal employes after a series of mail robberies in other cities still were in their shipping cases. He ordered them unpacked and put to work. He also ordered an investigation to determine who had been responsible for their non-delivery to employes.

MISS ROBERTSON SEES FAITH AS U. S. REMEDY

Renewal of Belief in God Will Be Salvation of America, Says Congresswoman

"America today needs more than anything else a revival of belief in God—a renewal of reverence and obedience for Him, a return to the old doctrine, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'"

This was the answer given by Miss Alice M. Robertson, Congresswoman from Oklahoma, when a reporter for the Boston American asked her what factor she believed most essential for a return to conditions of peace and happiness in this country.

Miss Robertson is staying at the Hotel Somerset, where she spoke before the Roosevelt anniversary dinner of the Middlesex Club.

"Doesn't most of the trouble in the country today lie in the fact that people are too selfish, too grasping?" she asked. "People have gotten so that they want things, things, material objects. And in seeking to get these material things they often lose sight of happiness.

TWO WORDS OVERWORKED.

"There are two words I don't ever want to hear again," she continued. "And those words are 'capital' and 'labor.' It seems to me as if those two classes need more than the rest of us perhaps, to return to an unselfish basis of conduct.

"There's no use in people complaining and crying because others happened to be gifted with more things than they. Would it do me any good, for instance, to complain because I was born with a plain face while other girls may be born beautiful?"

Miss Robertson then went on to

Congresswoman Who Says America Needs Revival of Faith

MISS ALICE M. ROBERTSON

discuss the Sheppard-Towner maternity bill. Her opposition to this bill, which is sponsored by most of the women voters' organizations of this country, has drawn upon her considerable criticism from many of these bodies.

In fact, in speaking of a meeting of a branch of the League of Women Voters in Muskogee, Okla., Miss Robertson remarked with a smile, "I suppose they've got their sniping knives out."

GIVES TOO MUCH POWER.

"I am opposed to the bill, in the first place, because it would put too much power in the hands of one woman," she said. "There are supposed to be restrictions and safeguards provided for in the bill, but there really are not.

"The power vested in this woman, whoever she might be, who would be appointed to head the bureau this bill would create, would be simply tremendous.

"In the second place, the bill doesn't provide for any effective method of accomplishing the things its backers hoped that it would.

"For example: Some club women once asked me to send them a copy of the bill. I did so, and a few days later received a letter thanking me for sending them the bill that showed how the money would be raised, and asking me to send them another one which would show them how the bureau would operate. That's how clear it is."

Miss Robertson added that she favors leaving such measures to the individual States, as a general thing, feeling that over-great centralization of government is dangerous.

SEES WORK OF CLIQUE.

She remarked, in passing, that the bill was introduced by a clique of women who wanted to put one measure across to prove to the politicians that the women's vote can be wielded as a unit.

A discussion of prevailing prices charged in restaurants brought a ready response from the Congresswoman. Prior to her election to the House she conducted a cafeteria in Muskogee.

"I don't believe the restaurants can ever drop their prices so very much until railroad rates are greatly reduced," she said. "I know from experience that food stuffs often cost over 100 per cent. more than they should because of the rates. In many cases the freight rates amount to more than the wholesale prices of the food units."

Miss Robertson spoke with considerable heat when the expulsion proceedings against Congressman Blanton of Texas were mentioned.

"I hope they put him out of the House," she said. "I didn't read his speech in the Record, but I have been informed that, had it been printed in an unexpurgated form, it could not have gotten through the mails. There are so many school children studying the Record now, so many women reading the Record, that we ought not to countenance such things."

Miss Robertson is a quiet, kindly-faced, white haired lady. To look at her one would think a seat in the national House of Representatives the last place in the world she would seek.

But she is there, after a campaign which she declined to wage on the issue of "women representatives." And she is there in earnest, studying the problems that come before her, working at her job in a way that many male Congressmen might perhaps copy with advantage.

B. U. STUDENT ESCAPED TURK CRUELTIES

Deserted Army and Recaptured After 7 Months in Sunless Room; Bought Freedom

Living for seven months in a house with no sunlight, speaking only in whispers with one loaf of bread a day as his food, was the lot of Leyon Bedrossanian of Aintab, Cilicia, who has just arrived in Boston to study at the Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service.

Bedrossanian in Armenia was forced to join the Turkish army and fight against his own people. He saw his opportunity to desert and lived in squalor until he reached his native city, Aintab.

He was recaptured by the Turks, suffered again many privations until a Turkish officer was bribed by his friends. He then joined the Red Cross and began work among the orphans and girls rescued from Turkish harems.

He is going back to take care of hundreds of children who are left without any education and proposes to bring to them the training which he will receive at the Boston University School of Religious Education. Hundreds of children in and around his native city are waiting for his return. Before leaving, he started a Sunday school in Aintab and children would come one hour before its opening, to get seats, so anxious are they for instruction of some kind.

U. S. WILL BE HIT HARDEST IF DEBT IS CANCELLED

Britain, Says Manchester Paper, Would Come Out About Even in the Deal

By International News Service

Manchester, England, Oct 28 — Cancellation of the allied war debts as recommended by former Chancellor of the Exchequer Reginald McKenna, in a recent speech, would hit the United States harder than any other nation, the Manchester Guardian declared today. The Guardian is one of the most influential papers in the United Kingdom.

"After reading Mr. McKenna's speech one begins to think that soon there will be none left believing that the huge international debts owed by one country to another, will be paid even if they could be paid," said the Guardian. "Two of the biggest annihilants are France and the United States. But although the French reparations claims exceed all Europe's debts to the United States they do not afford the same decisive or speedy. Moreover France has large debts owing Britain and America.

Britain owes just about as much as she was entitled to receive. Therefore, cancellation of the debts would hit the United States a great deal harder than any other nation. It is not surprising that America is not enthusiastic over the debt cancellation proposal.

"There are several arguments advanced in favor of debt cancellation. Then too, there are sentimental arguments. But that does not apply to the British debts or the German debts to France. There is the argument that the allied powers are incapable of payment. That applies to reparation claims in a less degree than to our claims on France and Italy. But that does not apply to the obligations to America.

"There is still another argument based upon the incapacity 'to receive payment.' That applies under existing conditions to large exporting countries like Britain and America, rather than to France. Lastly, there is an argument based upon the difficulty of carrying out forcibly or otherwise the flu trading exchange rates' to legitimate commerce into the widest gamblers.

"From an international economic standpoint, complete cancellation of all internal or debts created during the outbreak of the war would be a 'rough and ready' but probably a satisfactory solution of the economic ills."

Storage of Anthracite Adds to Production Cost

ANTHRACITE coal comes from a comparatively small section of Pennsylvania. In order to produce enough anthracite to supply the country's requirements, the Pennsylvania mines must be kept in continuous operation.

In summer production exceeds demand and it becomes necessary to place the surplus in storage. In winter the demand exceeds the productive ability of the mines.

For these reasons on September 1 the larger anthracite companies had about 4,500,000 tons of all sizes stored in plants belonging to them between the mines and eastern markets.

In addition to this about 2,000,000 tons of domestic sizes are carried on western lake docks.

This coal had to be loaded on cars at the mines, freight paid to the storage yards, unloaded and placed in storage. When it is sold, the operation is reversed, the coal is picked up, screened, reloaded on cars and shipped to destination.

The storing of sizes of anthracite used for ranges and furnaces is a costly operation. The biggest item arises from the breaking up of the coal into smaller and less marketable sizes, that sell for only $2 or $3 a ton.

The necessity of storing anthracite adds from 60 cents to $1 a ton to the cost of the coal, depending on circumstances. This figure does not include interest on money tied up in the coal, nor interest on the investment in the storage yards.

If consumers would take half of their supply during spring and summer months the cost of storage would be eliminated.

In the long run, the available supply of coal is not only what the mines are able to produce, but what the railroads can transport and your coal dealer distribute.

The best place to store coal is in the consumer's coal bin

The information contained in this series of advertisements of which this is No. 7, has to do only with the MINE producers' part in the transaction. Control passes out of the producers' hands as soon as the coal is loaded on cars for shipment to market.

Those desiring further information can obtain it by addressing

Submarines for Sea or Land Advocated by Simon Lake

By Universal Service.

New York, Oct. 28.—"Amphibious submarines" of small tonnage, capable of being transported by rail from the Atlantic to the Pacific, were advocated by Simon Lake, father of the submarine, in an address before the New York Electrical Society

The inventor made a plea that the submarine as an important war implement should not be disregarded at the arms conference, referring to it as the most reliable line of defense

He suggested that submarines being able to pass under ice, could carry commerce between Liverpool and Yokahama by going north of Russia, and so shorten the trip one-half.

DEVENS TO STAY UNDER CHARGE OF EDWARDS

Gen. Harbord Sets at Rest Rumor Command Will Be Transferred

Major-General J. G. Harbord, chief of staff of the United States Army, denied at the headquarters of the First Corps Area that Camp Devens would be taken out of the command of Major-General C. R. Edwards.

This rumor has been persistent in army headquarters for some time, but upon the authority of General Harbord, Camp Devens will be kept under the command of the First Corps Area and not placed in command of the department of the quartermaster-general at Washington.

ADVANCE MOVE FOR BOSTON.

In speaking of aerial mail service the general heartily indorsed it and hoped that Boston would soon obtain a landing place for mail planes

"This is a movement which will show the greater possibilities of the air service, he said "Nome has already been proven during the war Now there are good grounds for planning the aeroplane for commercial interests. It would be an advance move for Boston to put the air mail service into a position where every encouragement for its development could be advanced Nowhere can for it a agency are to be considered in the near future."

The general did not advocate any decrease in the cavalry unit of the army and thought that there would be always a place for this unit in modern warfare.

LAUDS GEN. EDWARDS.

In referring to General Edwards as commander of the First Corps Area, he continued: "The corps area is doing excellent work under its present commander, General Edwards. # Sherlock Holmes Returns!

The Greatest Detective The World Has Ever Known Resumes His Work After Six Years Absence

"I'm expecting to be murdered, Watson"—The Great Detective replied calmly.

"Well, Watson, it is good to see you in your old quarters once again. You come at a critical moment. I'm expecting something this evening," said Sherlock Holmes to his faithful friend, Dr. Watson.

"Expecting what?" Watson inquired.

"To be murdered, Watson," the great detective replied, calmly.

"No, no, you are joking, Holmes! But can't you have the fellow arrested?"

"Yes, Watson, I could. That's what worries him."

"But why don't you?"

"Because I don't know where the diamond is."

"Ah, the missing crown jewel!"

"Yes, the great yellow Mazarin stone. I've cast my net and I have my fish, but I have not got the stone. What is the use of taking them? We can make the world a better place by laying them by the heels, but that is not what I am out for. It's the stone I want."

"Well, Billy, what is it?" asked Holmes, as his servant appeared in the room with a card upon a tray. Holmes glanced at it with raised eyebrows and an amused smile.

"The man himself. I had hardly expected this. Grasp the nettle, Watson! A man of nerve. Possibly you have heard of his reputation as a shooter of big game. It would indeed be a triumphant ending to his excellent sporting record if he added me to his bag. This is a proof that he feels my toe very close behind his heel."

"Send for the police," Watson urged in alarm.

"I probably shall, but not just yet."

"Look here, Holmes, this is simply impossible. This is a desperate man, who sticks at nothing. He may have come to murder you."

"I should not be surprised."

"I insist upon staying with you."

"You would be horribly in the way."

"In his way?"

"No, my dear fellow, in my way. Please leave at once."

Why Stupid People Should Be Allowed to Commit Murder?

"I could never agree that the artist, or would-be artist, should be partially excused as having a special temptation to anarchical or immoral action. The argument seems to me to cut exactly the other way. A man who can express his passions has far less excuse for merely indulging his passions than a man who can only express them by indulging them. It is the dull man who should be allowed, comparatively speaking, to commit a few murders, or should be regarded at least with relative charity if he indulges in a few flirtations."

WOMEN GOLFERS CLASH TODAY IN BIG MATCH

Cecil Leitch and Alexa Stirling in Feature Play at Pelham Club Links

New York, Oct. 28.—Miss Cecil Leitch, who wears a triple golfing crown, bearing the championship of Great Britain, France and Canada, had a double task today that drew a large gallery to the Pelham Country Club.

She was scheduled to play Miss Alexa Stirling of Atlanta, formerly United States champion, in the morning, and James Barnes, Pelham's professional and open champion of the United States, in the afternoon.

This was the first meeting of the two women stars in this country. Miss Leitch defeated Miss Stirling in the British and Canadian women's championship tournaments.

Rivalry almost that big would meet in the recent United States title tournament were not marred because of the surprising defeat of Miss Leitch by Mrs. F. C. Lette Jr., of Chicago.

Since that tournament Miss Leitch's game has so improved that American golfers have generally conceded that she is all that they were led to expect prior to her American tour.

Miss Stirling has rested since the tournament. Many experts consider her technique unsurpassed.

Miss Leitch has demonstrated remarkable hitting power, but the length of Miss Stirling's shots with the wood are not no less envy even on the part of many male golfers.

A severe cold prevented a previous exhibition match arranged for Miss Leitch yesterday, but she was expected to be fit today.

The length of each of Miss Leitch's matches today was set at eighteen holes. For her match with Barnes a handicap of half a stroke a hole was arranged.

WAR INJURIES FAIL TO STOP GRID STARS

Brocker of Harvard, Driscoll of Georgetown and Lowe of Yale Going Strong

New York, Oct. 28.—That it takes more than war injuries to stop a real football player is being exemplified in more than one instance on American gridirons this Fall.

Brocker, a Harvard line candidate is one A. E. F. "Buddy" who wouldn't say die even though German bullets put him under for a while.

In 1918 he was regarded highly in the Freshman line. Then he went to France where he was wounded in both legs.

But Brocker wouldn't down. His health has been regained and his patient watches on the sidelines have given him that valued asset coaches call "football brains."

Mike Driscoll, who as a second lieutenant in the second division, was wounded at Belleau Wood, was an amateur boxer of no mean ability before the war.

He not only has taken up boxing again but is out with the Georgetown football squad at Washington.

"Bill" Lowe, former Fordham and Exeter tackle, although wounded twice by machine gun fire, holds down the right-end position on Jim Thorpe's Canton bulldogs.

N. L. PITCHERS KAYOED RUTH, COBB & CO.

American League Sluggers Fail to Hit in World Series Games

The result of the World Series has created a great deal of comment among players regarding the quality of pitching in the American League. The wretched showing of the American League sluggers against Giant pitchers gives those experts who have argued for years that American League pitching is inferior to that of the National a strong basis for their argument.

There is something different in the two leagues. The American has for years led in heavy hitting, and the National, even in spite of its decade of weakness, has played better defensive ball, and has appeared to have better pitching. Nor is there any doubt that with the passing of Coombs, Walsh, Bender, Wagdell, Doc White, Mullin, Donovan and others the quality of American League pitching has deteriorated.

The American Leaguers claim that the pitching is as good or better than that of the rival league, and that their batsmen are superior. They back up this up in the averages of Cobb, Speaker and others. The Nationals reply by saying their batters are equal to the American Leaguers, barring a few stars, one in that Speaker, Cobb, Ruth and Collins have failed to hit National League pitching in World's Series or other interleague games, and that the Yankees failed wretchedly before Brooklyn pitching.

It is hard to decide the argument—but it is certain that when the Yankees fell against Doug as and Nehf as they did after hitting American League pitchers as they did, the National has a shade the better of the debate.

CHAMPION HAS EDGE IN POOL TITLE PLAY

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.—The fight for the national pocket billiard championship had narrowed today to two men, Ralph Greenleaf, the titleholder, and Arthur Woods, of Minneapolis, with the former holding the advantage.

Greenleaf has won seven matches and lost none, while Woods has six victories to his credit and one defeat. All the other contestants are out of the running so far as first place is concerned.

LEWIS TO MEET POLK IN OPENING MAT BOUT

New York, Oct. 28.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, former heavyweight wrestling champion, in his first step to regain the title from Stanislaus Zybesko, will meet Joe Polk, inter-allied champion, in a catch-as-catch-can bout here next Thursday. It will be the first bout in New York under the new rules, which prohibit all punishing holds.

WAS RUTH RIGHT OR WRONG IN BALL STAND?

Many Players Have Abused Right to Play After World's Series Games

There seems to be considerable doubt even yet as to the merits of the controversy over Babe Ruth. The problem is not whether Judge Landis holds two jobs or not. It is a question of whether baseball law shall be enforced or whether players may flout it at will.

As to the law forbidding World's Series players appearing in exhibition games there may be doubt as to its justice. There is no doubt of Judge Landis' duty to enforce that law.

The law was passed for the simple reason that players on World's Series teams abused the privilege of playing, that they barnstormed in such a manner as to cheapen the reputation of their teams and leagues, and in some cases their alleged "World's Series" teams were plain hippodromes and swindles on the public. The club owners passed the law in order to check a growing evil.

That some latitude should be allowed is beyond doubt. In fact it has been something of a custom among club owners to grant permission to players who have proved trustworthy to play in certain games.

Such permits were given to a number to appear in Cuba and Florida. In some other cases players have gone ahead on their own volition and played games.

HARVARD WILL PLACE A PATCHED-UP ELEVEN AGAINST CENTRE

Harvard will place another patched-up team against Centre College tomorrow. According to word at Cambridge today the Crimson will have to get along without Eckie Clark, the lithe fighting centre; Captain Kane and Charley Tierney, the tackle; Roscoe Pitts and Jack Crocker, the ends, and Percy Jenkins and George Owen of the backfield, as well as Karl Pfaffman, the premier drop-kicking halfback

There doesn't seem to be a chance of Pitts or Tierney playing, as neither has dressed for practice this week. Pfaffman is still using a cane, while Fisher can in a pinch use Kane, Owen and some of the other invalids.

* * *

Oehrke will be called upon for the punting tomorrow. He is ranked a second to Pitts. He also will do most of the line bucking. Chapin has plenty of speed and should give Red Roberts and the other Centre ends a merry afternoon tomorrow

* * *

If Dr. Nichols decides that Grew is in good condition he will get first call for left guard, otherwise Charles Hubbard will be called upon. The same condition holds in the case of Gratwick, who will replace Churchill

* * *

Centre was an early caller at the Stadium today. Practice was to start there at 9.30 a. m. and the boys left an early call at the clerk's desk in the Lenox.

* * *

Despite the early hour Capt. Norris Armstrong, the great Bob McMillin, Jerry Snoddy, Red Roberts and the other praying Kentuckians were assured of a hearty welcome

* * *

The Harvard second team defeated the freshmen yesterday 6 to 0. Hamilton recovered a punt and ran 25 yards for a touchdown.

Centre to Bank on Open Style of Play

"We'll beat Harvard."

This was the complete statement of the entire Centre College football squad as it began its final practice here in preparation for its game with Harvard at the Stadium Saturday afternoon.

They were a confident lot these Colonels from Kentucky as they took our fair city by storm. They are here to hand a spanking to the Crimson instead of receiving one as was the case in 1920.

Harvard may win; in fact should win, but it will have to fight every inch of the way to halt the victorious surge of "Bo" McMillin and his noble band.

Centre's coaches didn't make any secret of their plans of attack. They are going to rely upon the open style of play. There will be forward passes, fake kicks and all that sort of thing at the Stadium Saturday.

A team which has mastered the open game is a dangerous foe as Centre will a pinch. A long forward pass like a wild right hand swing, is liable to turn the tide of battle in perfectly good football watch.

The Centre party is as follows:

Captain Armstrong, McMillin, Snoddy, Tanner, James, Crecelius, Bartlett Class, Kimbel, Murphy, Shadoan Green, Thomason, Lemon, Covington, Kubale, Roberts, Jones, Gordy, Flippin, Chinn, Ruharth, Newell, Gibson, Breese and Hudgins.

Coaches Myers, Moran and Thornhill, Student Manager John McGee, Trainer "Swede" Anderson, George Joplin Jr.

Mrs. G. C. Covington, Miss Lucy May Covington Gus C. Covington, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Banks Hudson, Louis Birk, Jake Robinson, J. Parks, Al Piers, Andrew Broadbun, Mr. and Mrs. Sam H. McMeekin, Miss Martha Allen, Tom McKitrick, Mrs. Marcellus Moss, Charles G. Mills, Arthur Timmoney, Morris Parris, Jr., Logan Caldwell, Henry Tevis, Jere Caldwell, James Randall, John Eads, May Mercer, H. Selman, John Klein, Captain Jake Bethurum, Nick London, Gus Hundley, J. C. Hopkins, Cliff Goldstone, A. Dowling, Miss Flo Bassett, Miss Mat Northern, Mr. and Mrs. J. Van Norman, Mrs. R. L. E. Elkin, R. L. Elkin, W. J. Pinson, George Joplin Jr., Chauncey Newlin and Branham Baughman, Jr

Jess Embry of Louisville, Centre's champion fan, Mrs. Embry and Miss Pauline Burns are motoring to Harvard. Embry has not missed a Centre game for many years

SNAPPY WORK IS SHOWN BY CORNELL AT PRACTICE

Ithaca, Oct. 28.—Cornell's practice was unusually snappy. A suggestion of frost in the air gave added zest to the practice, which was one of the fastest of the year

Assistant Coach Claude Mayer had the scrubs loaded with Dartmouth plays, and they gave the varsity a busy afternoon. The forward passes proved troublesome at first, but some fine defensive work by Ramsey and Lechler broke up most of the overhead attacks.

For a half hour before the scrimmage Kaw and Carey sent numerous spirals down the field and Hanson kicked a number of difficult field goals. Dobie is grooming Carey as an emergency relief punter and drop kicker.

OWEN AND GONLON WIN HARVARD'S CUP HONORS

NEW YALE TRACK HAS MANY NEW FEATURES

Great Oval for 440-Yard Run With Straightaway 24 Feet Wide

New Haven, Oct. 28.—A new running course for track and field sports on Yale Field is now completed, one of the features of which is a straightaway 24 feet wide for the 440-yard run. The track is being constructed in such a manner that it will be used as the cause of its bowl. Extra bleachers are being built for it which are not possessed by any other track in the country.

On the north side of this track will be an oval for the 440-yard run. The track's advantage over all others used for intercollegiate meets is that it will be a straightaway instead of a curve, as is the case with all other tracks. The straightaway is so located that a runner has a final stretch of 220 yards.

Kilroy's Goal From Field Gives Victory to Sherlock Eleven

Commerce had the wrong of a low score game to defeat at Braves Field yesterday. The game of the season which Commerce had a chance to win.

The game itself was a drawn but affair. Numerous penalties were inflicted, with Commerce the worse offender.

Commerce scored its first touchdown when Whalen punted the ball over the goal line. Sherlock brought it back to the 25 yard line. Kilroy on the next play kicked a field goal from placement.

Each team elected a substitute contest last Saturday and came out

CENTRE GAME AND 'BIG FOUR' BATTLE ARE GRID FEATURES

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Barnum may have been right, but you can't prove it by the New York football "experts."

Several of them fell for the hokus pokus last Fall, and, by announcing that Centre College would bounce the everlasting daylights out of Harvard, caused Centre to be installed as a heavy favorite in Wall street wagering, with dire results to rolls and football reputations. Yet not a single one of their number has picked Centre to win tomorrow's Stadium battle, despite the fact the Harvard team of this year is a much weaker organization than was last season's Crimson eleven.

Last Fall one or two of them in self defense attempted to cover up by piling lengthily with the 14 points acquired in that game, while only faintly mentioning the 21 points Harvard rolled up, but when one Wallace Georgia Tech held the Colonel's scoreless and only got by a margin of four touchdowns, they gracefully or otherwise acknowledged their passing apparatus had not been hitting full stride.

* * *

The fearful propaganda that preceded Centre's 1920 visit to Cambridge is doing laziness in other quarters, however. The K. R. O. sign already is out in 3 directions, and the popular query abroad in town is, "Well, what will Centre do Harvard this year?" And when you answer, "Centre will do to Harvard 14 what Harvard allows it to do," you're met with a flat air of "Let that be the measure of the passed long a time ago."

* * *

Harvard's estimate of Centre's strength is indicated in the fact that with Princeton looming as the Crimson's toughest opponent, Harvard gained a verdict by a mere 3-point margin over Centre a week before the Crimson-Tor clash. Harvard has never been able to have pulled to schedule seemingly difficult opponents immediately before her big game of the year.

* * *

There is a fact that Harvard intends to drop Centre College after tomorrow's game and if such be the case Harvard's habit will try to win the game by a sufficient margin to prevent Bryan from saying Harvard dropped Centre because it was too tough. None but McMillin Coach of collegians, is due to grad- ua next month [illegible] five years from now no one will say that the Centre eleven without "Bo" would be—well, just imagine what it would be, for yourself.

* * *

Georgia Tech thrust a 28-to-0 score upon a good-as-a song for Centre, and possibly Harvard may hold the same view.

* * *

A great proportion of the capacity crowd scheduled for the Stadium tomorrow are those who were treated to "Bo" and his work if "Bo" is permitted to perform can furnish an entertaining afternoon, for he is capable forward passwand an excellent broken field runner, unfortunately for Centre and Cores rooters, however, Harvard can legislate two or three men to constitute an "Ole" and such concentration can render ineffective the most efficient of football players.

* * *

"Bo" starts matters his "stuff" from a kick formation, ten yards behind the line of scrimmage. A whole lot of thing can happen before he has carried the ten-yards—unless he places upon him, [illegible] whole lot of things will happ.

* * *

Last year Harvard went after a touchdown at the very outset and although the Centre ball line was eighty yards away, Havard accomplished its purpose in seven plays. This year Harvard maygo after several touchdowns at the very outset and while Harvard may pt be able to gain eighty yards in each seven plays, Harvard ought to be able to forward to Centre's goal line early in the seriously sets forth on such journey.

* * *

All things being possible, it is of course possible for Centre to win tomorrow's contest. The breaks" of the game which have been falling with unusual consistency in Harvard's favor in late may fail to Centre's golden standard in such large and [illegible] numbers that Centre will win. The possibility of such happening seems very remote.

* * *

Although the Centre-Harvard game will prove the magnet for Greater Boston football fans, other fields will stage contests whose outcomes will perhaps have greater bearing on the ultimate ranking of eastern football teams.

* * *

Only a dozen unbeaten teams remain in the first for highest honors in the East. Already Princeton has been bumped by Annapolis and Chicago Syracuse has bowed to Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh has been defeated by Lafayette; West Point has been overcome by Tech; Boston College trounced by Detroit; Columbia licked by Amherst; Holy Cross defeated by Harvard and Georgetown; Brown beaten by Syracuse; Lehigh overcome by Penn State and New York Univ. mastered by Pittsburgh, making in all ten once potential champions which have passed from the picture.

* * *

Of the twelve unbeaten teams Yale, Dartmouth, Cornell, Lafayette, Annapolis Georgia Tech Washington and Jefferson, and Centre have won all their games while Harvard, Penn State and Pennsylvania each has been held to a tie contest.

* * *

Three of these twelve are sure to tumble from the honor role tomorrow unless tie scores prevail, for in addition to the battle Harvard contest in the Stadium undefeated Dartmouth meets undefeated Cornell at Ithaca, and undefeated Penn State clashes with undefeated Georgia Tech at the Polo Grounds.

* * *

Then there is the Syracuse-Washington and Jefferson game at Syracuse in which the "Presidents" may not be re-elected to victory, and there is the Pennsylvania-Pittsburgh battle at Philadelphia, where Penny, as in other years may make his initial bow of the season to Glen Warner's panthers.

* * *

There are chances, too — long, strong chances—that Yale may intervene and find themselves staging with defeat, but on past performances Brown and Rutgers, their respective opponents, do not figure as likely winners.

* * *

The two remaining members of the undefeated list—the Navy and Georgetown—appear to have tame playmates in Bethany and George Washington and should come through without a scratch.

* * *

The Dartmouth-Cornell game looms as the title contest in the recently "Big Four" series in which Pennsylvania and Columbia are the remaining members. Dartmouth already has taken the measure of Columbia, and if Cornell follows suit as next Saturday [illegible] while the trouncing of the last weeks hence should not occasion Dartmouth any great worry.

Just what the gloomy and mysterious Cornell coach will have to offer as a football machine is problematical. He has a wealth of veteran material which has been running up tremendous scores on "fresh water" opponents on the Rochester, St. Bonaventure, Western Reserve type. This was the case last year, before the Grass range stood and whipped the Big Red teams, and the majority is expecting history to repeat itself.

Dartmouth itself has yet to meet a strong opponent. The Columbia team, although outweighing the Green, proved no match for the Hanoverians, and after rolling up a comfortable margin of points, Coach Crowell employed the game as a workout for his second and third string players.

* * *

The Dartmouth coach has a most promising squad, although one lacking in varsity experience, and Dartmouth rooters are expecting to see the team at its best in tomorrow's all-important contest.

* * *

There are many who are grabbing short-end wagers that Georgia Tech will take Penn State into camp at the Polo Grounds. Georgia Tech appears to be fully as strong as last season, and the fact Penn State is not likely to have fully recovered from the effects of its strenuous battle with Harvard, is the impressive argument they offer.

* * *

Excellent football play, however, will not be confined to the as-yet-undefeated teamsac tomorrow. Princeton with Laurie and Oberly returned to the lineup is expected to prove too much a fresh start in its game with Virginia; Boston College and Fordham, both of whom were vanquished last week, meet tomorrow in a "comeback" contest that should well be worth the watching and one that will have a bearing on the ranking in the Catholic College "League." The Army team unquestionably is one of the strongest ever to represent West Point and plans to resume the winning surge where Yale interrupted it; Lehigh and West Virginia, although each have been trounced, are expected to produce a merry tussle tomorrow, and Columbia may display much better football against Williams than it offered against Dartmouth.

TECH SOCCER TEAM PLAYS AGAINST CLARK

The Tech varsity soccer team will play Clark College tomorrow afternoon on Tech Field. The loss of last Saturday's game to Dartmouth showed that the team was weak in "booting goals but with consistent practice this week the players have overcome the difficulty to some extent.

B. C. ELEVEN STARTS FOR BROOKLYN

Maroon and Gold Team Plays Fordham at Ebbets Field Tomorrow

The Boston College football squad left for Brooklyn at half past eight this morning, where the team will battle the Fordham University eleven at Ebbets Field tomorrow.

As the early hour of departure would make it impossible for the students to give their team a sendoff at the station, they gathered yesterday on Alumni Field before the practice and cheered long and lustily for the coach and the squad.

Boston College hopes by a win over Fordham tomorrow to make up for the defeat suffered last Saturday. The men are determined to fight their hardest, expecting to encounter stiff opposition from the Fordham eleven.

Fordham has a strong line and fast, hard hitting backfield. Like Boston College, Fordham was somewhat bruised in last Saturday's game, but has lost few men on that account than has Boston College.

On the whole, Fordham will have the edge on Boston College. The Maroon and Gold battlers are not expecting an easy victory, but are in no mood to go down easily to defeat. Smarting still under the sting of Saturday's lacing, the B. C. eleven is in a fighting frame of mind.

Besides, Fordham is one of the four Jesuit colleges in the East, and Boston College is determined to head the Jesuit college list, at least

Yesterday the team had a long signal and passing drill. The coach spent much time also on building up defensive tactics against the overhead style of play which Fordham is expected to employ.

Quartermaster Donelian, whom Cavanaugh had shifted to the right halfback post yesterday, pulled A tendon in practice and as a consequence was left at home. It was expected that Donelian would do the kicking Saturday, but his injury will make it necessary to use either Kallher or Wilson.

Jimmy Liston will play at left halfback. Liston has been suffering with an injured knee all season, but refuses to leave the game. He is one of the best line plungers of the B. C. team, and his presence in the game against Fordham will mean work for the Fordham line

The team that will line up against Fordham at the start of the game tomorrow is as follows: Captain Comerford, l. e.; Koslowski, l. t.; Elbarry, l.g.; Doyle, c.; Kelley, r.g.; Patten or Collins, r.t.; McManus, r.e. The backfield quartet will consist of Patten, q. b; Liston, l. h. b; Carmoli, r. h. b; Kellher or Wilson, f.

The Boston College team will arrive in New York early this afternoon and proceed at once to Ebbets Field where Cavanaugh will put his men through the final workout.

Fordham athletic authorities report a larger sale of tickets for the Fordham and Boston College game than for the game against Lafayette last Saturday. About four hundred B. C. students are a large number of the alumni will be present to cheer the boys from Boston.

The headquarters for the team in New York will be at the Hotel Bristol, Broadway and 47th street.

BASEBALL NOT OFF THE MAP IN THIS VILLAGE

North Grosvenor Dale, Ct. Oct. 28—While football holds the centre of the stage in New England at this time, it hasn't succeeded in crowding baseball off the map in this locality, and a rubber game is scheduled for Sunday between the American Legion post and the Nightingale Morse team.

Each has won a game, the second game being played last Sunday. The interest equals that in any mid-season contest, although most of the spectators will witness the game in overcoats.

Says Some Apartment Houses Are So Cold That They Keep Polar Bears for Watch Dogs

Winter is almost here, and it will soon be cold enough for the apartment house janitors to turn off the steam.

Don't worry about dying this Winter because anything that's frozen is bound to keep.

Of course all apartments aren't cold, but most of them could keep Polar bears for watch dogs.

You can imagine how cold some apartments are when a lot of people get lee in the stove in order to keep warm.

There is no difference between a janitor and a fireman. They are both gaill to see that fires are kept from burning.

An apartment house burned down not long ago and a tenant said, "This is the first heat we've had since I've lived here."

The landlord saw one tenant warming his hands over the blaze and raised his rent.

A radiator is nothing but an icebox which has worked its way from the kitchen to the parlor.

The only time the landlord makes it hot for you is when you can't pay your rent.

Of course even landlords have their ups and downs. They keep their rents up and their expenses down.

One tenant committed suicide by asphyxiating himself. The landlord was so tight he put in a twenty-five-cent claim against the man's estate for the gas he used.

Doctors claim that meat supplies seventy-five per cent. of the heat for the body. Judging from the rent we have to pay for apartments, they must burn porterhouse steaks in the furnaces.

DARCY BEATS SCHMUCK IN TUFTS TENNIS FINAL

The final match of the Tufts College tennis tournament for the Willard Crocker cup was played yesterday. Austin Darcy, '23, Dorchester, defeated John H. Schmuck, '22, West Springfield 9—7 and 6—4.

Willard Crocker, Tufts, '19, donor of the cup, was last year's singles champion in Canada. He was captain of tennis for two years while at Tufts.

WEST END HOUSE HAS PROFESSIONAL TEAM

For the fifteenth year the West End House is putting a professional basketball team on the floor. Dave Freeman, Johnny Donnelly, Butch Levine, Nate Hurvitz, J. Leppo, F. Bonick and H. Lakin will play. The West End House team dealfea games with the Pittons, Newburyport, Gloucester, Plymouth, Sharon, Fern Marquette, Portland, Bangor, Lewiston and other fives of such calibre. ### TECH FRESHMEN WILL MEET ANDOVER ELEVEN

The Tech freshman eleven is scheduled to battle with Andover tomorrow. The freshman coaches expect their charges to play together and show the same stuff they did in the Tufts game last week.

An all-star team made up of coaches treated the freshmen to real excitement at a scrimmage game yesterday. Chief Coach Metcalf intimates that the yearlings have got over their tendency to fumble and are much better at passing

YALE COACH PLANS TO USE NEIDLINGER AND O'HEARN TO SCORE

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 28—Head Coach Tad Jones called on both the first and second elevens yesterday for the final signal rehearsal for the Brown game.

He will start the same [illegible] which wrecked the Army eleven Saturday but will use the [illegible] string squad for any scoring chances that arise.

If Yale should reach the Brown ten-yard line Charley O'Hearn will probably get a call to throw some forward passes and Newel Neidinger to hit the line.

Yale's physical condition has come back in encouraging style after the gruelling West Point game. This was responsible for Yale's scrimmage practice yesterday, after the coaches had planned to rest the first string men.

Seven of them were called out for a line running contest against the scrubs in which Neidinger raced over the goal line three times and Sturm once.

From indications at the Yale ticket office today President Norris Gaddes of the football association estimated that fully forty thousand people will see the Bulldog and the Bear come to contest for the first game of the season in which Yale has clashed with another by similar universit.

Both sides will have brass bands and both will out loose their big cheering sections. The Yale whitepoofs will stage a burlesque between the halves.

The Brown players are expected here for a short practice today. Yale is giving odds of 2 to 1 and also even money that Brown will not score. The only Brown play that Yale dreads is the forward pass, which the Brunonians have been developing cleverly. Yale's defence for this is only fairly well developed.

The game will be: Referee, H. Gillender Philadelphia, umpire, C. A. Reed, Springfield Y M C A College, head linesman, H. Walkeye; field judge Fred Burleigh, Exeter

BROOKLINE HIGH ELEVEN IS DISBANDED

A wave of reform has struck football athletes of Greater Boston since the issuing of the drastic orders by Coach Carroll of Brookline, who disbanded his first team for infringement of training rules. This action on the part of Coach Carroll was brought about only after the barred players had persisted in breaking training.

Coach Carroll explained the necessity of such rules and adhering to them and informed the players that anybody considering them unjust could drop from the squad. Brookline High has given some poor exhibitions of football to date, especially the showing made against Somerville High.

Late hours, infraction of the smoking rule, late dancing on evenings before important games, are a few of the many complaints that Coach Carroll gave for his disbanding of the first squad. This recent ruling will now put Brookline High on even terms with Somerville. The Suburban League race has narrowed down to a six-team race. A few more happenings of this kind, coupled with the desire of a few outsiders to divide the league, will in all events cause the disbanding of what now is the strongest schoolboy league in the State.

Talk is going the rounds that more happenings of this kind are about to take place if the actions of a few players on different teams are not changed. Coach Carroll has crippled his chances for th a year, but his recent ruling will have a good effect on the lads in future years.

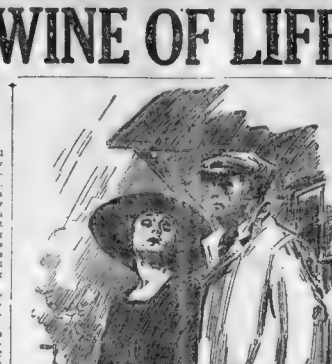
The Story of an Ambitious Young Sculptor Who Comes to New York Hoping to Win His Way to Fortune in the Metropolis

A Stirring Narrative of the Influence of Love on the Lives of a Girl and a Man of the Type That Fills a Big Niche in an Ever Changing Age



"We can't go like this," cried Torrie, as she leaves Storrow for New York

THE ACTION SO FAR

Owen Storrow, a young sculptor, coming to New York to perfect himself in his art, meets Torrie Farnum, a strikingly lovely girl studying for the stage under the direction of Herman Kranicker, a producer. Storrow soons his cousin, Charlotte Barker, from drowning, and she confesses her love for him. Later he marries Torrie, and on the advice of Chester Hardy, gives up sculpture and writes a novel of the North Country. Torrie quarrels with her husband, then repents and contritely tells him she has given up her stage work. But Storrow discovers some shady episodes in Torrie's past. He leaves her in despair, but returns when he discovers she is to become a mother. Torrie baby dies and they go to his farm in Ontario to start life anew. She goes riding secretly with Dennie Masterson and he is killed in an accident. She escapes.

SHE lay there, anxiously watching for her husband's return, remembering that a great deal would depend on the nature of that return. She had had proof enough, in the past, of the incredible rapidity with which news could travel up and down the entire lake shore, by what was known as "moccasin telegraph."

She knew that before another day had passed, perhaps even before another day had dawned, newspapers would appear with their printed recountal of what had happened at Death's Curve. Already, she surmised, the telegraph wires were busy with their first unorganized details of the case. It would be easy enough, she remembered, to identify both the car and the body. And Owen would know that Dennis Eastman had been in Canada, had been in the neighborhood.

He would know, she acknowledged, but how much would he know? There was no material evidence to connect her personally with the accident, for surely, in the end, it would be accepted as an accident. It depended solely on the way in which she continued to play out her part. And juce, so far, had favored her.

A Late Return

It was nearly eight o'clock when Storrow returned to the house. That alone was a somewhat disquieting occurrence. He came quietly, moving about the outer rooms with what seemed to listlessness of a very weary man.

Torrie, lifting her head from the pillow, could hear him ask for her, just as she could hear Uncle Abe's excited and somewhat amplified description of the injured ankle. This was followed by a silence, a fortifying and yet disquieting silence, a silence that might mean anything. A minute later Torrie's room door was pushed open and Storrow stepped inside.

"Are you hurt?" he asked very quietly, coming to a stop in the centre of the darkened room.

Still again, and with a coldness of tone which she could not fight back, she repeated the story of the injured ankle.

"Where did this happen," asked her husband.

"A little way up the Ridge Road," she told him.

"How did you get back to Pine-Bank?" was his next question.

"I was given a ride by a farmer's wife," she told him. He stood silent for a moment or two.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" he finally asked.

"No," she replied, matching the tenseness of his voice with the tenseness of her own. "Uncle Abe has brought me everything I need."

He seemed on the point of saying something, but on second thought preferred remaining silent. He turned and stepped out of the room, closing the door behind him.

Torrie did not sleep that night. He knew. She felt sure that he knew.

It was a week later that Torrie returned to Pine-Brae one afternoon with the mail, an unusual touch of color on the pale hollow of the cheeks from which the midsummer tan was beginning to fade. Storrow, who had joined her in becoming an adept at handling any accidental signs that might flash through their silences, was not long in discovering that something out of the way had happened. The exact nature of this, however, was not made known by Torrie until toward the end of their evening meal.

"I've just had a letter from Herman Kranicker," she offhandedly announced, after a somewhat prolonged period of speechlessness.

"I thought so," he admitted, as their eyes met. And an established was her Indian summer of silent timidities that her color deepened even in the face of her careless reaching out for a cigarette and her equally careless movement as she struck a match and slowly inhaled and exhaled a thin cloud of smoke.

"What made you think so?" he asked, as impersonally as she could.

"It's about the last of the — of the wonderful ones who remain," was her husband's reply, not without its touch of latent bitterness. And again her color deepened. But this did not frighten her away from the subject in hand.

Going Back

"Krassler," she went on with a quiet resolution which brought a minute quaver to her otherwise well-controlled voice, "writes that he has a part waiting for me."

Storrow did not look up at her.

"He always has a part waiting for you, my dear, has he" he demanded. Yet a moment later he bore the appearance of a man who regretted what he had said. And Torrie herself did not choose to reply to that question

"I think I ought to take it," she said, instead.

"Why?" asked her husband, not altogether deceived by the note of hesitancy she had succeeded in throwing into that statement.

"Because things can't keep on like this," she announced, meeting Storrow's gaze with a sudden flash of audacity.

"They won't," he told her

"Why won't they?" she asked

Her face looked fatigued, and touched with age. He realized, as he stared at her, that she was no longer a girl, but a woman who must have explored life to its heights and its depths

"Because we can't let them," he said, with his own face shadowed as if what seemed the hopelessness of the situation remained itself.

"That's why I think it would be so much better if I took this part when I've the chance," she explained, once more completely master of herself. "It's only for eight or nine weeks, apparently, until Orrie Orondo can get back from Europe in time to take it over. And eight or nine weeks like that ought to give us a chance of getting things back into perspective. Don't you think that I'm right?"

He did not answer her, for he was busy, at the moment, trying to picture what Pine-Brae would be like without Torrie.

"You'd surely go back to New York for the Winter months?" she was asking.

He had never thought of that. But thought was being suddenly and sternly forced into unexplored channels

"Yes, I think I'd go back for the Winter months," he asserted. And it was her turn to be secretly harassed by the look of age and unhappiness on the other's face.

"Then that makes everything simple enough," she announced, almost with triumph. "I've always hated to think of you as alone up here."

Express Whistled

The day for her departure came with a steady nor'east wind, unusually mild for that time of the year. It left the clay road to the county seat muddy and deep-rutted, so that Storrow, as he drove the farm wagon with Torrie's trunks and bags piled behind them, found excuse enough for his silence in the attention which he had to give to his driving. And he was anxious that the wait at the railway station should be as short as it could be managed with safety.

Thanks to the rain and the heavy roads, that long-dreaded wait proved to be mercifully brief. By the time Storrow had bought tickets and checked trunks and returned from making sure that his train was safely tied, the cry and whistle of the incoming express could be heard through the quietly falling rain

Torrie's face blanched [illegible] up at her husband, with its set jaw-muscles of his less face showing through the tanned and windreclaimed face, and her lip quivering.

"Oh Owen" she said foolishly, as her tears began to flow

"It's all right," he assured her, scarcely knowing what he was saying. "It's all right."

He carried her two handbags to the edge of the wet platform. She followed him, her face contorted with misery.

"We can't!" cried Torrie. "We can't go this way—we can't!"

He imagined, for one weak moment, that she had relented of all her purpose, that the thought of flight was proving too much for her. And then he remembered. He remembered that it was inevitable, and that it was forever.

"Kiss me, Owen," Torrie was whispering to him, with upturned face, for the dripping train had come to a stop beside them and a porter had thrown open the Pullman end door. "Kiss me!"

He took her suddenly and almost fiercely in his arms and kissed her. He kissed her tenderly, with a tightening of the throat which made it hard for him to breathe. He heard the conductor's imperseorally coddled "All-aboard" and saw the colored porter lift his two handbags into the car after her. He saw the train get under way, the last car pass the platform, the early-fall lights grow misty and vanish in the falling rain. When he turned slowly about and spraddled through mud and water to where his team stood waiting, steaming in the wet air, he carried on his lips a taste of brine, from the tears he had loved and never in all his life would kiss again.

Storrow, when he returned to New York two months later, went back to the city with the feeling that he was re-entering an [illegible] He went back oppressed by a sense of defeat, defeat which in some way he had delivered into Torrie's hands.

Those intervening weeks at Pine-Brae, after Torrie's [illegible] had been anything but happy weeks. The place seemed too permeated with her presence, too haunted with unexpectedly disturbing memories. He did what he could to purge it of these by quietly yet studiously removing every possible trace of her, from the overstuffed slippers which beckoned doubtfully in carrying into the open the accordion-pleated silk undershirt, room through at the edge which still hung behind her bureau door.

Return to New York

Nor did Storrow return about a definitely mapped out line of conduct. He had known too much of drifting. For too long he had stood merely marking time. He found himself possessed by a second wind of ambition, an impatience to assert himself a hunger to re-enter the world on which circumstances not of his own choosing seemed to be elbowed him.

To this end he had vaulted his over-pompous Park Committee in the matter of the big-deferred statue of Tecumseh, pitting out to them his declaration that an arch was with a decorative frieze, surmounted by a figure thereon also, would be more effective than the earlier considered lifelike figure of the chieftain on a bike of Scotch granite. It was only after much argument, and many consultation over the costs and modifications and sketch models, that he newer and more ambitious plaques agreed to, although that agreement came with a number of moreir less absurd qualifications which he accepted and then ignored as a step to his directors' personal dignity. But when he returned to the city, and back to the city with the feeling that he was re-entering an arena. He went back oppressed by a sense of defeat, defeat which in some way he had delivered into Torrie's hands.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

ROMANCE OF NEWLY WEDDED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, King Feature Syndicate Inc

"SINCE first Dick Went told me they were in New York," replied Dad Lee, smiling at me shrewdly. "I've been trying to get in touch with them—trying to show that the wools continent ain't too big for the old sire to cover to get back to where his filly is pawing. But you're awful cold, m'dear. Don't love the old man much, do you? You've never even had the meet up with my Martha's boy."

I sprung to my feet.

"You're in a position to do much for you," I said. "And I have my own ties already formed. Neal won't meet you. He's bitter—naturally. But I'll pay your board and room and try to give you a small weekly allowance."

"I don't need no allowance. I'll make out 'til your husband gets back," he volunteered with an air of kindness. "Or even help you if you need the old man. Do you? Or does Martha's boy? Do you folks need money?"

Lending Money

Puzzled by this second exhibition of generosity, I stared at him—then beyond him, trying to fathom his motives. Suddenly I got a glimpse of the common-looking man lurking in the doorway, theoretically just out of sight, plainly just within earshot

"Do you folks need any money?" repeated Dad Lee

"Are you offering to lend me money?" I demanded, loud enough for the man skulking in the doorway to hear.

"Could anything be more natural?" whimpered Dad Lee sanctimoniously.

"No, I thought you had none," I replied ruthlessly. "First you let dear Father Andrew lyland finance you. Then you gave me the honor of paying your bills——"

"Ever hear of that commandment about honoring your father and mother?" broke in Dad Lee.

"Is there any reason I should honor you?" I shot back

"Maybe there ain't, m'dear; but I'm trying to do the right thing by you now. You got to give me credit for that. You've been holding a tight rein on me, and so I had to turn to the ponies. They've been running good, and the first thing I do is tell you that I don't need any allowance and stand ready to lend you about all of the hundred I made. Can't that help a bit?"

"Is it?" I asked, eyeing him sternly, striving by sheer force of will to drive him into self-betrayal.

"Sure it is! I'm glad that I want to know is why you ain't more daughterly. You don't confide in me at all. You don't even tell me about your troubles and how you feel having that hubby of yours stealing somewhere else all th'e while.

Looking for Something

Again I got the feeling that he was looking for something to use against Jim. I replied circumspectly:

"My husband will be back when he's accomplished the business which took him away."

I could have vowed that I heard a snicker.

"Wait a minute," cried Dad Lee. "I'm an old fool. But you're my Martha's Silly, and I'm going to dash my cheek and give you half just to make me feel right with [illegible]."

ATTRACTIVE NEGLIGEES

By Rita Stuyvesant

ATTRACTIVE negligees, well-cut breakfast coats and woolly bathrobes are all represented in the new Autumn displays.

Corduroy, both soft and bre-caded, is used with success for breakfast coats and may be lined with soft silk or crepe. Although the shops are now showing these coats at great reductions, they may be made at home with very little trouble. These coats are cut on straight lines to the hips, and are there lengthened by a flounce of the material set on by a heavy cording. A slim girdle of corduroy confines the fullness at the waist. The neck is finished with a sailor collar and the sleeves are short. One may find these smart coats in dark corduroy, turquoise, rose, lavender or pink corduroy with linings of contrasting colors or white.

A dainty negligee for cool mornings may be made from pink wool crepe of light weight and prettily embroidered. It is a slip-on affair, having a length of the material folded over and stitched flat at the under-arms. The round neck is scalloped in French blue silk, and there is a bit of French blue embroidery scattered across the front. Very large buttons, covered in blue at the waistline, and a girdle of blue gros-grain ribbon is drawn through the seam.

This clever negligee might also be made up in other color schemes, such as rose with black ribbon and embroidery, or yellow with pale blue is pleasing

Another quaint negligee combines flowered albatross with black velvet ribbon and the effect is most picturesque. It is a high-waisted model, made from a yoke. Lace beading is threaded with the velvet ribbon, and borders the yoke, neck and sleeves. A frill of fine filet edges the neck and sleeves. There was a velvet bow with enormous ends hanging at the front.

A beg jacket of pink crepe is merely a square of material, bound with satin ribbon and a circle cut from the centre for the head to pass through. This opening is also ribbon bound and finished with a silk tassel at the front. When worn, the jacket forms a point at the front, back, and over each arm

Bachelor Girl's Reflections

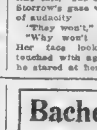
BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1921 by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

LOVE is what incites the cave-man to drag a woman around by the hair, and makes the civilized man permit a woman to drag him around by the nose.

A man's life is like a musical comedy: there is always one woman in it, who is the star—but it takes ninety-nine others to make up the "ensemble."



No woman ever had a chance to "spoil" a man: every man spoils himself, from the time when he begins throwing his toys on the floor for his nurse to pick up to the time when he begins throwing his clothes around for his wife to pick up.

Lots of a man's courage comes in bottles, and most of a woman's in boxes—hat boxes, pill boxes and vanity boxes.

As soon as a man gets enough money to enjoy life, he acquires a lawyer to keep him from saying the things he wants to say, a doctor to keep him from eating the things he wants to eat, a wife to keep him from doing the things he wants to do, a valet to make him wear the things he hates to wear, and a motor car to get him into trouble with the traffic police.

Perhaps the reason why a man always admires a tiny foot with a high instep is because that's the kind that always walks over him roughshod and places itself gently but firmly on his neck

If a man only knew how happy it makes a woman to be miserable, and how miserable it makes her to HAVE to be happy when she's miserable, he wouldn't interfere with her pleasures by trying to "cheer her [illegible]."

No matter how much a woman weighs, how much she knows, or how much she earns, she just LOVES to think of herself as a delicate, helpless "little creature" being protected by a big, strong man!

Your husband's real opinion of you, Daisy, is something mid-way between the mean one he explodes before breakfast and the flattering one he exudes after a good dinner.

"Diapepsin" for Bad Stomach, Indigestion

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" now! In five minutes your stomach feels fine. Don't distress what upset your stomach or which portion of the food did the damage. If your stomach is sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; heart dizzy and aches; you belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress. Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite food without fear. If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless antacid is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only sixty cents for a large one at drug stores.—Advertisement.

YOURHEALTH IN WINTER

—By Brice Belden, M. D.—

THE surest way to avoid Winter infections is to breathe as much fresh air as possible. Everybody should adopt the open window habit.

The ventilation of the home is especially important. Proper ventilation can not be maintained unless the windows are opened, the degree of opening to be regulated by the severity of the weather They should be lowered more or less from the bottom, not thrown wide open Pneumonia, tuberculosis and colds are bad air diseases. The open window habit goes a long way toward ending their prevalence.

During lunch hour or at some other suitable period all the windows of workrooms, offices and schools should be opened widely, thus removing the stagnant atmosphere and filling the rooms with fresh and invigorating cold air. In the case of amusement places the doors should be thrown open at the end of each performance

Ideally, there should be a constant inflow of air and a constant outlet, for a free and continuous circulation of fresh air is essential for the maintenance of a wholesome atmosphere

Overcrowding in street cars and other public conveyances is a menace to health, since it encourages unhygienic conditions which conduce to the spread of disease.

Proper use and supervision of the means of ventilation in such conveyances and the avoidance of overcrowding would go far toward protecting the traveling public from the spread of disease.

CLEAR YOUR COMPLEXION

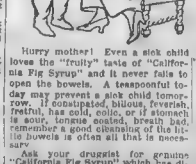
MOTHER!

Your Child's Bowels Need "California Fig Syrup"



Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

THE WAY TO SORROW

A GIRL IN LOVE WITH A MARRIED MAN

By Beatrice Fairfax

I AM a girl of eighteen and deeply in love with my employer seven years my senior. He is married, and has one child, and is not happy with his wife. He has expressed his love to me a great many times, and I have gone out with him without my mother's knowing anything about it. Do you think it proper?

He has asked me to leave home and both of us should sail for foreign quarters. I live with my parents, and my mother nags at me because I often ask for money to buy different articles of clothes. I give her my full salary.

If my mother knew anything about this love affair, she would force me to leave my position, and that is one thing that I shall not do as the only one I shall ever love. I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me what to do.—Writing Both.

My dear, I advise you to stop living on cream puffs and try a slice of roast beef. Does it sound calculated to disgust? It does. It's just another way of telling you to wake up and look at facts.

Why do you think your mother would force you to leave your position if she knew about this man? Isn't it because you know her instinct is to protect you from evil? Aren't you perfectly well aware of the fact that her one desire is to screen your future taken

You know deep in your heart this no good can come of this thing you call a "love affair."

But is it love that has any lasting qualities? Don't you think the man is unkinder and a bitter one to endanger a girl in his employ when he knows all about the wild and love and how badly it can work out? Don't you suppose he harried his wife for love? It didn't last. That isn't the fault oflove—it's the fault of the man af what he brings to love. He brings selfishness and dishonesty. You can count on that.

Any man who has a wife and child and who takes advantage of the fad that a young girl is working for him is only one I shall condemn. I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me what to do.—Writing Both.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By S. C. FORBES

The upbuilder of the greatest national bank in America, the late James Stillman—not his amorous son—used to growl at many business men who came to try to obtain a loan from the bank, "It's not more debts you need, but more capital." A lecture usually followed, but not a loan.

* * *

I understand that bankers have decided to adopt this Stillman attitude towards many applicants for loans who formerly were accommodated. The 1920-1921 collapse drove home to many bankers the danger of making heavy loans to individuals or concerns that used the money as a sort of part of their fixed capital and counted definitely upon having such loans renewed. As the war boom expanded and enormous profits were easily and rapidly reaped, millions and millions of bank loans were advanced, not for ordinary, seasonal, short-term commercial purposes, but really as working capital for embarking upon more or less speculative ventures. The losses thus incurred by banks have been enormous—although extraordinary success has attended efforts to hush up the experiences of most of the banks thus caught.

* * *

The terms exacted by banks for salvaging certain large organizations they could not afford to let go have been severe. In some instances stockholders of reorganized concerns have complained about their treatment at the hands of the bankers has been utterly heartless. The general complaint has been that the banks "saved" tottering enterprises for the sole purpose of saving their own funds, and that the saving was accomplished at the expense of others, including security-holders, both stockholders and bondholders. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, the Cuba Cane Sugar Company and the Mollne Plow Company are among the illustrations cited.

* * *

The policy of advancing enormous sums to concerns that could not possibly liquidate them within three months or a year, and to finance the operation of their business was unsound. Many banks have suffered for their indiscretion in this respect, but a much larger number of business men and security holders have also been made to suffer very severely with less to show for it. However, corrective processes have been going on for many months, and this phase of the situation will gradually be cleared up.

* * *

Of course, some of the "reorganizations" were forced upon the banks against their will. Others were brought about by the banks' own initiative. As one correspondent expressed it—and this extract from his letter is given chiefly because it is characteristic of the tenor of many complaints:

"Many bankers instead of fostering manufacturing industries in financial stress have taken advantage of the situation for their own profit and completed reorganizations along lines that some have known could only result in final failure, except under the most favorable conditions, and would result in further reorganization later, with additional profit, while the investor suffers and also loses his confidence in investments and bankers."

* * *

It is to be hoped that there will be less pawn-broking by bankers and more genuine banking here-after. It is not sound business for a bank to make loans which do not liquidate themselves naturally. No business can exist and place itself so completely at the mercy of bankers as many did during the last few years.

* * *

Mr. Parish, for many years the conservative head of one of New York's Gibraltar-like trust companies, once told me that he refused a proffered $5,000,000 Standard Oil deposit. H. H. Rogers, Rockefeller's speculating partner, was dumbfounded. It wasn't usual for Standard Oil's money to be refused. Mr. Parish explained his attitudes bluntly and bluntly to No. 26 Broadway. He didn't want Rogers or Standard Oil or anyone else to be in a position to demand that he call loans on any individual who was being "gunned for." If such a demand were backed by a threat to write a check for $5,000,000, the banker carrying such a deposit might find himself helpless to resist. Mr. Parish told Rogers that he would not accept more than $500,000 of Standard Oil's money, so that they would never be in a position to coerce him into doing anything against his wishes.

* * *

Prudent manufacturers, merchants and others should take a leaf out of this long-headed banker's book, and avoid putting their necks into any banker's noose. Circumstances can arise which compel bankers to pull in funds hurriedly and hungry. To avoid embarrassing experiences of this kind, business concerns should take steps to acquire more capital and thus be less dependent upon credit liable to be withdrawn at a critical moment.

Stocks Strong in New York and Boston; Call Loans Renewed at 6 Per Cent.

EARLY ADVANCE WAS LED BY RAILROADS

Steels, Oils, Coppers and Equipments Figure in the Upswing; Trading Very Active

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

The New York market was strong and in soon after maintaining a higher level from the start. Attendance on the exchange was unusually large and morning trading was of large volume. First hour transactions approximated 350,000 shares. Gains ranged from fractions to more than three points. Removal of the railway strike menace accounted for higher valuations on railroads. Coppers became strong in the second hour.

Among stocks to advance the most were Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Reading, Erie, Paul, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Great Northern preferred, Mexican Petroleum, Royal Dutch, Houston, Texas Company, Studebaker, Anaconda, Kennecott, Utah Copper, Standard Oil of California and at a high for the year. Submarine Boat showed a decline at its highest, but failed to retain it all. It was active for a while.

Call loans were renewed at 6 per cent, but the rate dropped to 5½ per cent, during the morning. Foreign exchange weakened, demand sterling opening at $3.91, off 1½ cents.

WENT UP AT OPENING.

There was a general advance at the opening, initial gains varying from fractions to more than two points. Pullman showed the largest. As a class rails were strongest. The rise was met by offerings and speedily halted. At the end of thirty minutes gains and others were showing losses, and there were few indeed quoted at the first figures. Before the end of an hour there was another upward movement. The selling was for profit taking. The advance yesterday afternoon was due to discontinuance of railway labor officials in rescinding their strike order. Early transactions were principally in oils, coppers, equipments and some specialties. Tobaccos, sugar and coppers were quiet. Motors were irregular and trading dull. There was moderate borrowing demand for stocks after the market closed yesterday, with 5½ per cent asked for industrials in general, call rates ranging nominally 5 per cent. American Sugar loaned at 1-32 premium.

PREPARING FOR NOVEMBER 1.

The altitude of the call rate this week is attributed to banking preparations for November 1. Bankers in British loan requirements on that date are estimated about $72,000,000, and it is believed that the strikes order, Early transactions were principally in oils, coppers, equipments and some specialties. Tobaccos, sugar and coppers were quiet. Motors were irregular and trading dull. There was moderate borrowing demand for stocks after the market closed yesterday, with 5½ per cent asked for industrials in general, call rates ranging nominally 5 per cent. American Sugar loaned at 1-32 premium.

PREPARING FOR NOVEMBER 1.

The altitude of the call rate this week is attributed to banking preparations for November 1. Bankers in British loan requirements on that date are estimated about $72,000,000, and it is believed that the strikes order, maturing notes have already been largely liquidated. There is no doubt, however, corrective processes have been going on for many months, and this phase of the situation will gradually be cleared up.

* * *

Of course, some of the "reorganizations" were forced upon the banks against their will. Others were brought about by the banks' own initiative. As one correspondent expressed it—and this extract from his letter is given chiefly because it is characteristic of the tenor of many complaints:

"Many bankers instead of fostering manufacturing industries in financial stress have taken advantage of the situation for their own profit and completed reorganizations along lines that some have known could only result in final failure, except under the most favorable conditions, and would result in further reorganization later, with additional profit, while the investor suffers and also loses his confidence in investments and bankers."

* * *

It is to be hoped that there will be less pawn-broking by bankers and more genuine banking here-after. It is not sound business for a bank to make loans which do not liquidate themselves naturally. No business can exist and place itself so completely at the mercy of bankers as many did during the last few years.

* * *

Mr. Parish, for many years the conservative head of one of New York's Gibraltar-like trust companies, once told me that he refused a proffered $5,000,000 Standard Oil deposit. H. H. Rogers, Rockefeller's speculating partner, was dumbfounded. It wasn't usual for Standard Oil's money to be refused. Mr. Parish explained his attitudes bluntly and bluntly to No. 26 Broadway. He didn't want Rogers or Standard Oil or anyone else to be in a position to demand that he call loans on any individual who was being "gunned for." If such a demand were backed by a threat to write a check for $5,000,000, the banker carrying such a deposit might find himself helpless to resist. Mr. Parish told Rogers that he would not accept more than $500,000 of Standard Oil's money, so that they would never be in a position to coerce him into doing anything against his wishes.

* * *

Prudent manufacturers, merchants and others should take a leaf out of this long-headed banker's book, and avoid putting their necks into any banker's noose. Circumstances can arise which compel bankers to pull in funds hurriedly and hungry. To avoid embarrassing experiences of this kind, business concerns should take steps to acquire more capital and thus be less dependent upon credit liable to be withdrawn at a critical moment.

The new policy, once it can be instituted all round, will be better alike for banks and borrowers.

NEWSBOYS HELP UNVEIL SCOTTY MEMORIAL

Tablet in Brookline Town Hall Dedicated to 15-Year-Old War Hero

William Jennings Bryan, Governor Cox and Mayor Peters were among the prominent men on the program today for the unveiling of the bronze tablet in memory of the Brookline "newsie," Albert Edward Scott, who at fifteen died a hero's death in France after killing or wounding thirty-one German foes.

The memorial, which is unveiled at 4 o'clock today, was placed on Brookline Town Hall as a gift of the newsboys of Greater Boston, of whom Scotty was a conspicuous member until he volunteered for service overseas. The tablet cost the newsboys $1,000. It was modeled from a painting by Gale Hoskins, which was based upon official photographs.

President Harding and Vice-President Coolidge sent their personal regrets on being unable to be present at the unveiling of the tablet.

The President approved the memorial in a letter to Edward Keavin, director of the Roosevelt Newsboys' Association in charge of raising the funds for the tablet.

TRIBUTE FROM COOLIDGE.

Vice-President Coolidge paid a warm tribute to the boys who sell papers.

"Newsboys go everywhere, see everything and know everybody," he said. "There is no experience in which they do not have their part and no walk of life which they do not know. To their spirit, to their enterprise, to their courage and to their devotion it is fitting that a memorial should be erected bearing the name of one of their number who has become immortal."

Keith's Newsboys' Band of New York played a prominent part in the services. The band was brought on here from Manhattan by government order. The band boys range from ten to eighteen years of age. On the way from New York the boys gathered on the decks of the destroyers and played "The Star Spangled Banner," after which a message was sent to Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt in commemoration of the birthday of the former President.

COMRADES IN LINE.

The boys were welcomed here by a committee headed by Lieutenant Sabin, U. S. N., representing Rear Admiral Gleaves, commandant of the Navy. They will be given quarters in the South Armory.

From the Edward Devotion School, Brookline, of which Scotty was a graduate, the band today marched to the Brookline Town Hall, accompanied by the members of Brookline Post, American Legion, Scotty's comrades of Company 101st Infantry, the Boy Scouts, G. A. R. Veterans and members of the Disabled American Veterans.

The line of march was along Harvard street, through Coolidge Corner, where Scotty sold his papers, to Harvard square, up Washington street to the Town Hall where the exercises will be held.

The band will parade tomorrow morning and in the afternoon attend the Harvard-Centre game in the Harvard Stadium.

CURLEY TO SPEAK IN EAST BOSTON TONIGHT

Former Mayor James M. Curley will hold a public meeting at the East Boston High School, Marion street, near Princeton, this evening. Mr. Curley will speak relative to the registration of women as a moral and economic duty; the prevailing ten-cent car fare; the decadence of the Boston waterfront under the present municipal administration and the rejection and abandonment of the maritime interests of the city, which has resulted in hundreds of longshoremen and men of similar industrial pursuits being thrown out of work, and to discuss the vital and necessary steps to rehabilitate Boston's commercial and industrial prosperity.

ADMIRAL SIMS ILL AT NEWPORT HOME

Newport, R. I., Oct. 28.—Rear Admiral William S. Sims is confined to his bed in his home here suffering from a severe cold coupled with an attack of indigestion. Although scores of friends called today at his home to make inquiries concerning his health, Mrs. Sims met them all with the positive assertion that the danger is very slight and that the admiral expects to be at his desk again tomorrow.

HARBOR GARBAGE ODORS MUST BE ELIMINATED

Protestants at Hearing Told New Contract in July Will Have Guarantee

Spectacle Island down Boston harbor, the home of the Metropolitan district of the Boston Development and Sanitary Company, is being converted by the engineers of the Commonwealth, South Boston, Winthrop and Revere as a place of unpleasant odors that are wafted across the waters by all the winds that blow.

The prospect of this condition continuing is not pleasing to those who live near the shores, many of whom were present at a hearing held in the City Council chamber yesterday afternoon, over which Dr. William C. Woodward, health commissioner, presided.

BIDDER OFFERS RELIEF.

Mayor Peters called the hearing to order and stated its purpose, then giving way to Dr. Woodward. The head of the Health Department expressed the opinion that the plant should be closed, and intimated it would be if it were not for the fact that it would be difficult to find other means of disposing of the garbage.

He said that there is no question but that the odors constitute a nuisance; that the contract requires the refuse disposal be undertaken without becoming a nuisance and that this has not been done. The new contract, which begins next July, will not be skewarded until there is a cast-iron guarantee that there will not be a continuance of the nuisance, he declared.

C. H. Van Etten, representing the garbage company, said if the city would pay for the installation of new apparatus the odors could be eliminated. Robert J. Lyons, representing Coleman Brothers, said if his company, which is the lowest bidder for the new contract in the world, the odors will be done away with.

REACHES TO BACK BAY.

Arthur Perkin of Marlboro street, a summer resident of Nahant, said the smell often becomes intolerable in Nahant and at times is offensive even in the Back Bay section of Boston. Colonel Jefferson R. King, speaking for General C. R. Edwards, testified that at times the odors are displeasing to those at Fort Strong, on Long Island, and to the people at the Argyle Club in South Boston.

Other protestants were L. D. Griffin, acting chairman of the Winthrop selectmen; Charles S. O'Connor, Dr. Edward T. Harrington, Representative Paul Hines, Raymond P. Delano and Representative Joseph Toomey.

Aerial Torpedoes for Fast Mail Foreseen by French Expert

By International News Service.

Paris, Oct. 28.—Aerial torpedoes that will carry urgent letters from London and Paris to New York within 12 to 15 hours, were foreseen today by Louis Dreyfus, the French air pioneer, whose aerial expresses make daily trips between London, Paris and Brussels.

Small, pilotless machines, with a motor and air screw adapted to function automatically at high altitudes will cross the Atlantic n a few hours, according to Dreyfus. These machines would be launched by mechanical mechanism and would attain a speed almost equaling that of an artillery shell. They would be guided by directional wireless, he said.

For Sake of the Cat's Tail—For Your Own Sake and—For Humanity's Sake—

You Ought to Want Your First Child to Be a Daughter

Copyright, 1921, Star Company.

A poor, tearful lady recently asked for a divorce. Her husband had treated her badly because her first child turned out to be a girl instead of the boy that his lordship desired.

She got her divorce and she deserved it.

We get many letters from women, sad and worried, because they bring little girls into the world when some self-sufficient, foolish husband wants a boy.

On this subject we purpose to write very seriously. The fanciful heading to this editorial referring to the cat's tail was intended to catch the eye of foolish men and make them read on.

It is a blessing for every family when the first child born is a little girl—here are some of the reasons:

The girl inherits the qualities of the father. And the mother, being devoted and unselfish, is always anxious to hand down to future generations something wonderful about her husband. Tell your foolish husband that ONLY HIS DAUGHTERS inherit his qualities—that is to say, only the daughter inherits his greatness if he has any. Galton's great work on heredity proves that the genius of the man descends through the daughter almost exclusively.

(We know only two exceptions—the younger Pitt and Filippino Lippi—do you know of any others?)

Conceited fathers, if you want to live in history, pray for daughters. So much for man's vanity.

Parents should pray that the first child may be a daughter because that gives to the boys as they come along the example, the gentle guidance of an older sister.

If little Willie is born first, he says to Essie Susie when he is five and she is three, "Watch me pull the kitty's tail. Watch me pull the dog's ear." Later he says to little Susie, who tags along behind him, "Watch me put a pin in the chair for somebody to sit down on. Watch me put pepper in this bunch of flowers for someone to sniff," et ceters, et ceters.

When a little daughter arrives first, the mother is made happy by the possession, and gives to that daughter her own gentleness and kindness. And little Willie, from his earliest, blinking, bow-legged days hears from little Susie things like this:

"No, Willie, you MUSTN'T pull the cat's tail; it is wrong. You MUSTN'T pinch Fido's ear; it is wicked. You MUSTN'T make grandma sneeze; it is naughty. You MUSTN'T put a pin in the chair; it's cruel."

You know, of course, that woman, the older sister in the human race, has taught men all the gentleness and kindness that is in them. Woman's teaching and pleading has gradually brought man up from horrible savagery and cannibalism to the semi-civilization of today and will make man a civilized being eventually.

What woman has done for man and the human race, the older sister does for the boys in the individual family.

The family that begins with a girl begins properly with the right foot forward.

A girl is easier to bring up—doctors know that; thus a daughter first makes life easier for the inexperienced young mother.

The daughter helps the mother, comforts her, and even makes her forget how preposterously she overrated her husband when she married him—that is a GREAT comfort.

The daughter helps to civilize her father and make him better, no matter how good or how bad he is when she arrives.

A son makes the average egotistical man brag and think about himself. A daughter makes him gentle, makes him think about others and especially makes him kind and considerate to the daughters of others when he thinks of his own little girl.

Therefore, for the sake of the poor kitten and its tail, and for the sake of the human race as above mentioned, pray that your first child may be a daughter, and tell your wife what you are praying for.

Nobody knows how many poor women fret, fearing that they will not have boys to flatter the vanity of conceited husbands utterly unworthy of the unselfish goodness of their wives.

Think Work and You Work

Interesting Suggestion on Psychological Effect

Copyright, 1921, Star Company.

Corporations put the word "Courtesy" on their street cars and omnibuses, and they say that seeing the word so often affects employes. Perhaps it also affects the public. Courtesy from the public toward the employe is as important as courtesy on the part of the worker.

A reader suggests that if the words WORK and HUSTLE were printed more often and more conspicuously it would stir up every energy and enthusiasm. Perhaps it would. Here is the reader's letter:

208 Walnut Street, Montclair, N. J.

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—The dynamic value of the "printed word" is admitted when placed where it can be read, and made so attractive that it IS read.

The psychology of mental impressions is creative or destructive.

A message creating appeal leading to active desire for possession or attainments is true advertising and true Americanization. What?

Psychologically speaking, were our great American public to see the words "WORK" and "HUSTLE" on every turn for thirty days, we all would be thinking work, eating work and doing double work. How?

You know that if every man in this great and glorious country were to give U. S. A. one solid hour's work of real constructive effort, the present financial and economical trouble would be solved and the "world's industrial conquest" within easy grasp.

Were you to cause the message of "work" to be featured in "head line" in the joke sheet and everywhere possible in all the Hearst publications you would be putting across the greatest stunt of the age. The direct INDIRECT work appeal will cause your millions of daily readers to start hustling a little faster or doing some real work, by the same philosophy that you can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink unless you have previously caused to be created a thirst for WATER.

My thought is that work applies to the executives who are now playing golf as to the actually hand workers.

We are all Americans of greater or less degree, those who produce, real, those who absorb are the drones of the American hive of bees.

Yes, Mr. Smith, you ARE right, undoubtedly. Constant repetition causes thought, thought produces results. "Repetition is Reputation," and repetition gets results.

Thanks for your letter.

African Unrest Alarms Britain

LONDON, Oct. 28.—A press telegram from Nairobi announces that "Abyssinian raiding parties have crossed the border into the Kenya Colony." It concludes, "The situation is believed to be serious."

This last phrase is pregnant with significance.

More raids by the Abyssinians and Gallas upon the rich nomad tribes of the North, the Turkana, Suk, Rendile and Samouru, are frequent occurences at this season, and are scarcely worth recording by telegram, in that they do not in any way affect the European settlers. To such raids, however, has been attributed an increase of cattle disease in the colony, and posts of King's African Rifles have been established along the frontier to prevent them. This may explain what the press correspondent means by saying that the British have evacuated Gaduaquanna and Sulemuddo without any casualties.

During the war the British undoubtedly lost considerable prestige among the natives from Alexandria to Cape Town, and on all sides there is considerable disaffection.

The Abyssinians argue that we have been forced to cede the port of Kismayu to the Italians, whom they defeated with the immense loss at Adowa; that we are being driven from Egypt, and that our hold on India is weakening; they have before them, too, the recent success of the Moors against other Europeans.

I would insist, at the risk of being called alarmist, that we have to face growing unrest all over Africa, and that risings on a large scale are certain in many districts.

Stars and Stripes

Some people right here in New England believe Sandy Hook is a Scotchman.

"I'd like to be a little fish,"
Said youthful Jack McGrath,
"For then I'd have no ears to wash
Nor batter take a bath!"

In England there are over 2,000,000 women who would like to have proof of the old saying that for every man and every woman there is a mate somewhere.

Chief Laws of Logic

By Garrett P. Serviss

Will you please add to my obligations to your articles by giving an explanation of the "law of the excluded middle"? The explanations I have found are either designedly obscure or they do not explain.—A. S. L., New York.

I DO not think that I have distinctly recalled the law of the excluded middle since I went to college, though doubtless I have often, unawares, been saved by unconscious application of its principle from some quagmire of fallacy cunningly concealed in life's pathway.

There are few branches of science whose special terms are so soon forgotten by the average student as are those employed in logic, but there are also a few whose underlying principles seem so like the natural milk of reason to the alert and rapidly developing mind of youth.

The Syllogism

The engine, or the touchstone, of logic is the syllogism, a term made up of a combination of Greek roots, meaning a putting together of ideas for the sake of reaching a conclusion. The syllogism indicates the natural manner in which a clear mind tests the truth, although it may not be, as was once held, the way in which the mind originally discovers truth.

The syllogism is made up of a certain number of parts—the major premise, which may be likened to the general principle laid down; the minor premise, similarly likened to the particular case, or example, that is in question, and the conclusion or final decision. The syllogism is also divided into three terms, each of which occurs twice.

One, sometimes called the major premise and the conclusion; another, sometimes called the minor premise and the conclusion; the third, called the middle term, occurs in both the major and the minor premise.

Think about this a moment, and you will perceive that the so-called middle term serves to connect the major and minor premises, thus enabling the mind to reach through them, the conclusion. To quote the words of Dr. Wilson (though I made no specialty of logic, I loved the old man's manner, and so learned something through personal attraction):

"The deductive judgment, or conclusion, is never contained in, or derived from, one of the premises alone by any process of immediate inference. But it is deduced from the two premises by means of the middle term, and is, therefore, a mediate inference."

There is a whole lot of other terms used in connection with the syllogism, but we can, perhaps, get along for our present purpose with those above enumerated. To make their meaning more evident let us form a syllogism, in the algebraic way, i. e., by using letters to represent the terms and the propositions included in them, thus.

M. is P (major premise); S is M (minor premise), therefore, S is P (conclusion).

Here, M stands for the middle term, while P and S are the extreme terms. Now, the rule, or principle, of the excluded middle is simply that between any proposition and its contradictory there is no middle or third proposition, or judgment possible.

Third Thought Ground

A is either B or not B. There is no intermediate term between them. Consequently, you cannot form a syllogism with contradictory terms, for the syllogism requires a middle term. The principle of excluded middle is, in logic, the third of the three fundamental laws or grounds of thought.

The first of these laws is that of identity, i. e., a thing is itself and no other, A is A. The second law is that of contradiction, or difference, which means that a thing cannot be Not-A. The third law brings us back to the excluded middle, of which this definition is given in the Standard Dictionary: "Everything not included under a given term or its negative is excluded from existence," which accords in substance with what we have said above.

The science of logic is labyrinthal, but still it furnishes both ballast and steering gear for the mind.

Letters to the Editor

Safety Device

Editor Boston American:

Regarding the numerous automobile accidents, I would suggest the following for the Protection of automobile owners:

Why not use a device somewhat like that used in the seats of the roller coasters, namely, a rod which may be covered with a rubber hose upon which the passengers in the rear seats may rest their arms when this rod is pressed against them? This could be a movable rod which could be set back against the front seat when no one is sitting in the back and thrown back protecting the passengers when the back seat is in use.

In closed cars and, in fact any car, a chain in like manner covered with rubber might be more suited in that it would be more pliable.

S. NACLERIO.

Quincy.

Why Pay Interest?

Editor Boston American:

A copy of your issue of September 21, 1921, came my way and among other interesting things asked the question, "Why does the government pay interest?" Indeed why?

And why should the government or anyone else pay rent, interests or profit?

It seems to me that a fine question for debate in all publications, schools, colleges, open forums, etc., would be something like this:

Resolved, that rent, interest and profit are of divine origin; or, resolved, that rent, interest and profit have a common origin; or, resolved, that rent, interest and profit are different names for the same phenomena.

PENALTIES FOR USING BORROWED PLUMES

SHALLOW HEART and Empty Fate were married not long ago.

There was a great time over the wedding—it was a church affair with eight bridesmaids and a best man, and ushers and flowers and everything.

Everyone kissed the bride and congratulated the bridegroom, and they went away together on their wedding journey showered with rice and old shoes, after the amazingly sensible custom that has come down from before the middle ages.

And now they're back from their wedding trip, and Empty Fate has brought suit for divorce. She says Shallow Heart deceived her.

She met him doing war work, and he told her he was rich and high-born—at home. And she believed him. But when she was married she found that he was not only very poor, but rather humble in his station in life.

And back she is at home sick, and tired of the bargain. No, he hasn't been cruel to her—no, he doesn't drink or make love to other women. He's just poor, that's all, and instead of taking her home to an old castle with an ivy-mantled tower and villagers pulling their forelocks as they passed—he wanted her to move into a commonplace little house, somewhere in Tooting, with one maid and a charwoman.

Remember Claude's Fairy Tales

I wonder if she will get the divorce?

Not in this country—that's one sure thing.

But in America—perhaps.

And the very same day the papers told of this story with rather big Headlines, tucked away at the bottom of one of the pages was a little paragraph telling of a very plain little woman who brought suit for divorce in an American city because her husband told her before she was married to him that he had $3,000 in the bank, and it afterwards turned out that he hadn't a dollar in the world, except his rather small and insignificant salary.

And the lady says she doesn't mind the lack of money so much —but what she hates is the deceit. From this out, she declares, she will never believe another word he says about anything, anywhere, anytime.

I've always wondered about that Claude Melnotte business of telling fairy tales about castles in Spain, to seduce a romantic girl to fall in love.

Don't you remember Claude? Why, he was the gardener's son in the "Lady of Lyons," and he made Pauline believe that he was a distinguished stranger and had a palace by the Lake of Como, orange groves and fig trees, and grape vines and fountains, and everything. And when Pauline found he had been telling her fairy tales, she started suit for divorce—but Claude went to the wars, and became a great general. And when he came home in his uniform, Pauline flew into his arms and all was well. I wonder what stories he told her about his adventures during the war. Nothing email about them, I'll warrant.

When Borrowed Plumes Fall

Poor Pauline and poor Claude Melnotte. How natural they are in spite of the high-flown language of the old-fashioned play.

Now if these modern Claudes could only fix away somewhere and come back—heroes of famous posts or noted actors or something —there might be a chance for them.

What folly it all is, the strutting in borrowed plumes of any sort at any time. They always fall to pieces at exactly the wrong time.

BE A PHILOSOPHER

You have planned for the past year to do a certain thing when it came time for you to take your vacation.

And now, when the time has arrived, unforeseen circumstances have made it impossible for you to do it.

It seems to you that it has always been so all through life.

What's the use—you set your heart on a pleasure plan or duty and began to make it a part of your existence, your ideal, only to be abandoned.

You are so discouraged, disgusted and disjointed with anything else which could possibly take place, that you are positively ugly.

But what does your ugly mood get you? In the way of altering the case? Nothing.

And it is apparent to everyone with whom you come in contact that you are sour about something and the chances are that one look at your wry face impresses the beholder with the fact that you deserved whatever you got.

And maybe if you were more graceful and more philosophical about it you would get a fair amount of sympathy and make so much better impression that you would not lose out in the end.

EXPECT TO GET THE BEST OF OTHERS

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

LIFE is not all conflict. It is also a peace party.

When you are in a conflict, you strive to get the best of others. When your are peaceably related, you can also get the best of others—that is, you can get the best they have to give you—by expecting it!

In a fine sense, it is: ask and ye shall receive. If you front the world with a friendly face, it is likely to smile at you in turn. The echoing words send back your own kind of call.

If you expect the best of others, they will meet your expectations.

If you find the world crabbed, you confess your own sour disposition. If you are wont to sing the praises of human nature, you are publishing the autobiography of a beautiful spirit.

Whether in war or in peace—international or interpersonal—but little happens that is not recognizably the working of the law of compensation.

The pendulum of the universe includes human life. Always its swing is from cause to effect. As ye sow, so shall ye reap. For worse and for better. Remember that—for better also!

Moral Law

It is not right, it is not just, and therefore it is not true, to make the moral law merely stern and vengeful. It also comes with smiles and rewards when you observe (and expect) these.

And so it is with your relationships. If you approach the world with suspicion, it will justify your disrespect. Your fearfulness breeds timidity or imposition.

But face your fellows with faith, and they will even exceed your expectation. Your optimism stimulates their self-respect. You open the deeps in their nature, and they discover more worth in themselves than they knew to exist there!

Perhaps you think some men are fortune's favorites, because they bask consciously in the smiles of others. Don't you believe it; they have earned their place in the human sunshine!

They habitually offer their best. They expect the same of others. What they give and expect, they also get—the best!

For two generations, Germany rattled a menacing sabre, the while she spoke fair words of peace. She is paying the penalty of her real purpose, which was sinister. They who take up the sword, at least risk perishing by the sword.

On the other hand, here is our America as peaceable a people as ever lived, and as unselfish as we are essentially made, we are generous to a fault. As witness our treatment of Cuba, the Philippines, Porto Rico, and China.

As a people, we give our best and expect the best. And we have in return the noblest gift of the world—the love of the nations of the earth!

Say what you will of the supposed hatred of Germany, or the presumed envy of England, or the imagined hostility of Japan—whatever may seem to be their governmental attitude—it is a fair guess that America has the goodwill of all the populations!

Apart from their feeling towards us, if peace depended upon the peoples themselves, wars would be no more!

Peace on Earth

Anyhow, more than the sweeping reduction of armaments, this expectation of the best from all the hundreds of millions of mankind will contribute towards the consummation of peace on earth.

As Senator Lodge has intimated, the spirit of war is not in the weapons of the war, but in the hearts of the people.

It remains to be added: that the spirit of war is not so much in the hearts of the people, as it is in the ruthless rivalries of the commercial powers that be, and in the chancelleries of the world—helpless to handle the enormously complex and clashing interests of the nations.

However, you are not called upon to settle these problems, except by indirection and as you may help towards their wise and just solution by becoming part of the intelligent national and international public spirit.

But there does remain for you a distinctly personal application of our theme.

As your enlightened self-interest surely causes you to wish for the most favorable results from your varied relationships, you must put yourself in position for such results by confidently expecting the best.

Because you are, at heart, fair and square, you are not likely to expect of others that you are not willing to give to them. Therefore, this high expectation from others is sure to raise your own standard of conduct continuously higher.

This is not an inversion of the Golden Rule, but the inner secret of its working.

You will gladly give to others that best and finest which you expect of them.

Fixing the Blame

It is only when a motorist runs into a stone wall and has to be taken away in a box that it isn't the other fellow's fault.
